Cheerful Here, Gloomy There
Four-Legged Fish
Two Sides of Mussolini
Good News for Mice

—By Arthur Brisbane—

SOME NEWS is good, some is gloomy. California sends cheerful news. Dr. E. E. Moore, very able surgeon of the Pacific Coast, reports that in his going to and fro, which includes use of flying machines, for hurried operations, he finds much more optimism, and, says he, "optimism must come first."

The American Machine & Manufacturing Co. of San Francisco reports that "not on the Pacific Coast at this time, nor have there been for the past fortnight, nor are there in sight for the next month, sufficient ships to carry the canned fruits and dried fruits ordered by Britain and the continent."

Coming increases in British tariff account for part of this, not all.

England sends unpleasant news, savage fighting by Communists, who have established a reign of terror at Birkenhead, suburb of Liverpool. Rioting in the streets, savage fighting, and shops are looted.

Thirty-eight thousand unemployed explain the trouble.

The unemployed abroad are not as patient as our own.

In days when attacking Darwin was popular, before those that used to fight him began fitting their teachings to his science, the question was frequently asked, "Where are your connecting links?"

When Darwin said life began in the ocean, that creatures came up from the water and gradually made themselves at home on land, anti-Darwinians asked, "Where is your link between water animals and land animals?"

The question is answered now by a scientific expedition that brings back from Greenland many samples of stegocephali fossils, an animal fish with four legs, between a fish and a frog in the scale of evolution.

Over five thousand such specimens were found on the Greenland shore, plenty of missing links, and their cash value, sold to museums, would be enough to pay the cost of a three years' expedition.

Scientists classify evolution of life on the planet into five principal groups: First, fish, then frogs, then reptiles, then birds, finally mammals—ourselves. The birds, able to fly out of danger, might have ruled the earth instead of ourselves. But once they got wings they probably stopped thinking. All they had to do was fly from danger. Our feeble, two-legged ancestors had to stay on earth, fight it out, and use their brains, so they won.

Prince Knud, young son of the King of Denmark, went on that expedition, spending long months at hard work, setting a good example to other sons of kings, including sons of American money kings.

One side of Mussolini's character was seen when he negotiated a treaty restoring limited temporal power to the Pope, the right to issue money and postage stamps, and make laws for the tiny Vatican territory.

Another side of Mussolini's character, his real attitude toward "temporal power," was shown Sunday, when he dedicated a monument commemorating the capture of Rome from troops of the Pope in 1870.

The monument stands on the spot "where fighting Italian troops, the Bersaglieri, charged through the Pope's troops, and broke their resistance." King Victor Emanuel, believed to be a good Catholic, attended the ceremonies with Mussolini and reviewed fifty thousand Bersaglieri.

The Osservatore Romano, organ of the Vatican, calls the ceremony an offense to the church, suggesting other heroism would have been equally well commemorated.

Mussolini's attitude toward the church seems to be that of his fellow countryman, Napoleon Bonaparte, hostile, at heart. Napoleon took the crown from the Pope to crown himself, as one greater than the Pope. But he restored property and salaries to the Catholic clergy, saying that he needed spiritual as well as military soldiers.

Probably the United States is the strongest Catholic country today, a fact that the Pope is pleased to recognize in many ways. He has conferred the rank of hereditary marquis on Dr. George J. Ryan, head of public schools in New York City, a title that will be inherited by Dr. Ryan's children. The title is conferred upon the head of New York's public schools "in recognition of his services to education, the church and the community generally."

Dr. Ryan was already a knight of honor of the Order of St. John the Baptist in Spain. He has the cross of the Papal Order of Loretto, the Equestrian Order of the Holy Sepulchre of

PONZI RELEASE PLEAS FAIL

Charles Ponzi, whose investment "bubble" burst with loss of $9,000,000 to the public, was refused release from State Prison today by Judge Edward P. Pierce of Supreme court.

Judge Pierce dismissed Ponzi's petitions—one seeking to force Warden Hogsett to release him on habeas corpus proceedings, and the other seeking to compel the state parole board to grant him a parole.

Ponzi's case was presented to Judge Pierce in written arguments dispatched from State Prison by the financial "wizard." Asst. Atty. Gen. Bacigalupo argued for the state. A few months ago the Supreme Court refused to grant Ponzi permission to appear in person at t day's hearing.

Ponzi's term for swindling his investors is nearing an end, but he wants his freedom to prepare for a battle against the Federal authorities, who plan to deport him.

1 DEAD, 4 DYING IN MAINE FIRE

Newport, Me., Sept. 20 (INS)—Lawrence McKenzie, five, died of suffocation, his four brothers and sisters were near death, four firemen were overcome by smoke and 13 persons were carried from a burning dwelling house today during a spectacular fire of undetermined origin.

Lewiston, Me., Sept. 20 (INS)—The Maine Packing Company plant in South Monmouth was destroyed during the night by fire. Loss was estimated at $75,000. Defective wiring was given as the cause.

Rains and Warmer, Says Weather Man

Showers are predicted for tonight and tomorrow, according to the weather bureau. A slight rise in temperature will accompany the rain, with gentle to moderate winds.

BABY RESCUED FROM RIVER

Richard H. Willard, Jr., aged 2, Malta st., Mattapan, fell into the Neponset river near his home today and was rescued by Thomas J. McCarthy, of Royal rd., Mattapan.

McCarthy was talking politics with a neighbor when he heard the screams of the children with whom young Willard had been playing. He ran to the river, caught sight of the boy's head going downstream and dived to the rescue without removing his clothing.

Carl Wahlstrom, an uncle of the rescued child, believes that all heroes should be recognized and he telephoned the story to the Boston Evening American.

Seabury Honored by Municipal League

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—Samuel Seabury, who conducted the investigation of the administration of former Mayor Walker of New York, today was chosen an honorary vice-president of the National Municipal League.

Henry L. Shattuck, of Boston, was elected to the council.

WOOL MAN ON WAY HOME VANISHES

Bloom, Wealthy Merchant, Is Missing Over Month After Starting for Boston

Disappearance of Joseph Bloom, 40, a well-to-do wool waste merchant of Boston and New York, was revealed today.

Bloom left his summer home in Arverne, N. Y., on Aug. 21 to take a train from New York for Boston and has not since been seen by his family. Police were called into the case Saturday.

He was to have visited his brother, Jacob Bloom of 42 Rockledge st., Roxbury, but never appeared there. A private search for him has been conducted and police were notified by John R. Cahill, a New York insurance man, who wrote Bloom for a large policy.

Bloom's present home is in Central Park west, New York. He has a wife and two daughters, Dorothy, 14, and Evelyn, 10.

Until several days ago he and his brother operated a wool waste business in Roxbury under the name of Bloom Bros.

There is no official theory as to the cause of his disappearance. Some time before he vanished he shaved a moustache he had worn for years. He usually carried a large sum of money and wore diamonds. He is said to have lost heavily in the stock market.

One Democrat Found in Mashpee

Mashpee, Sept. 20 (AP)—The largest primary turnout in Mashpee's history voted today. 105 out of 179 registered voters. An indication of the town's political leanings was evident in that but one Democratic ballot was cast.

The Republican vote for governor was: Brownell 1, Goodwin 86, Sullivan none, Youngman 13. For lieutenant-governor, Bacon 77, and Campbell 16. Secretary of state, Cook (unopposed) 82. Treasurer, Prescott 21, Ulin 63. Auditor, Coldwell 13, Cook 66. Attorney-general, Warner (unopposed) 85.

In the contest for the executive council Cote received 81, Glennon 12 and Mahoney 3.

STOCK PRICES MOVE HIGHER

New York, Sept. 20—Stock prices moved higher in late trading on the New York Exchange today with activity remaining dull. Steel shares, which were notably weak yesterday, managed to get back part of their losses with U. S. Steel preferred advancing over 2 points while the common gained a major fraction.

American Telephone, selling ex-dividend, advanced nearly 2 points after opening slightly off. Case, Atchison, Delaware Lackawanna, Motor Products and American Can showed gains of 2 or more points. Point or better gains were shown by Consolidated Gas, Standard Oil of N. J., Union Pacific, United Aircraft, Coca Cola and numerous other issues.

NEW ASHFORD GOES 4-1 FOR YOUNGMAN

Little Berkshire Town, Voting 100 Per Cent Strong, Completes Balloting at 8:30 A.M.

New Ashford, Sept. 20 (INS)—As an "eye opener," in the state-wide primaries in Massachusetts today, this little Berkshire town completed its vote at 8:30 a. m. and announced to the world that for the first time in 150 years in a primary here a 100 per cent vote was cast.

The total number of votes cast was 34, including 19 men and 15 women. Thirty-two voted Republican and two Democratic. Two Democrats voted in this "Republican town" in 1928.

GOODWIN TRAILS

The highlights of the voting in this first town to report in today's primaries were:

Lieut.-Gov. William S. Youngman led Frank A. Goodwin, in the Republican race for the gubernatorial nomination, more than four to one.

Pres. Gaspar G. Bacon, of the Senate, had about the same lead over Councillor Chester I. Campbell in the G. O. P. race for the Lieutenant Governor nomination.

Youngman received 21 for governor and Goodwin 5; Bacon 23 and Campbell 5 for lieutenant-governor; Cook 19 and Coldwell 7 for auditor, and Prescott 25 and Ulin 2 for treasurer, all in the Republican contests.

TWO VOTES FOR ELY

Gov. Joseph B. Ely was unopposed for renomination in the Democratic primaries, and got both votes.

David J. Brickley and Raymond A. Fitzgerald, waging a fight for the Democratic lieutenant-governor nomination in a field of eight, split the two Democratic votes.

Hip Broken in Fall

New Bedford, Sept. 20—Maurice A. Hurley, 20, of Chestnut st., fractured his hip today when he fell 15 feet from a ladder while painting at his home.

Stand on War Debts Shows Legion Is Real Legion of Americans

THE American Legion showed itself indeed a LEGION OF AMERICANS in the action taken by its convention in Portland, Oregon, on the following vital questions:

First: The League of Nations.

Second: The World Court.

Third: The cancellation of war debts.

To any proposal that the United States should join the League of Nations, the American Legion declared itself "UNALTERABLY OPPOSED."

As to the adherence of the United States to the World Court, the American Legion declared itself "OPPOSED—ON ANY TERMS."

BOTH of these institutions it denounced as "entangling alliances of the worst sort, against which George Washington strongly advised the nation in his farewell address."

On the insidious and persistent effort to coax and cajole, or threaten and coerce the United States into the cancellation of Europe's debt for the war loans made by the United States, the declaration of the Legion deserves verbatim repetition.

"Whereas the Government of the United States during the World War," says the resolution of the convention, "loaned to the entente allied nations billions of dollars for the purpose of carrying on the war against Germany and her allies, and this money was secured by the sale of government bonds to the citizens of the United States,

"Be it resolved by the American Legion that they are unalterably opposed to the cancellation of the whole or any part of the debts owed the United States by foreign governments, generally known as war debts."

LET THE CANCELLATIONISTS PUT THIS IN THEIR PIPES AND SMOKE IT.

THE American Congress—both Senate and House of Representatives—took identically the same position only last year.

"It is hereby expressly declared," said the joint resolution of the House and Senate, "to be

DuBois Will Is Filed; Bitter Fight Looms

As the will of Charles E. DuBois, jeweler and wife-slayer, was filed for probate in Dedham today, a court battle loomed over the final disposition of his property and that of his wife, Edith.

The document filed in Norfolk County probate court today leaves everything to DuBois' mother, Mrs. Cecile DuBois, of New York City.

It was drawn and signed by DuBois last Wednesday, two days before he took his own life and while police were searching for the body that he had secreted in a concrete vault, made by his own hands, in the cellar of his Plymouth cottage.

ESTATES TANGLED

The will specifies that all property, real, personal and mixed, shall go to the mother. It names Harold E. Patten, a law associate of Jeremiah J. McAnarney of Quincy, DuBois' lawyer, as executor.

As no bond was filed with the will there is no indication yet of the estimated value of the estate. DuBois' signature was witnessed by McAnarney and by Ralph W. Prout, another associate, and Miss Anna L. Gilotte, a secretary. Prout filed the will.

It was learned today that the estates of DuBois and his wife are in such a tangle that it may take months to straighten them out.

Another development today was a change of front by Dist. Atty. Winfield M. Wilbar, who reversed a decision yesterday to enter the case personally to determine if Grace Atwood, blonde sweetheart

EXTRA POLICE ASKED BY ELY FOR POLLS

Sends Request to Headquarters for More Men at Two Charlestown Precincts

Other Political News on Pages 4, 5 and 12

Extra police, with orders for "strict attention" to the counting of ballots, were asked by Governor Ely today as primary day showed an influx of new Democratic votes.

Gov. Ely's request was relayed from police headquarters to the Charlestown station, but no reason was given for the action of the governor.

It mentioned specifically the two precincts in the Sullivan sq. section, but covered also the whole of Ward 2 in Charlestown.

The first arrest of the day came at noon in Lynn when Raymond J. Megginson of Graves ave., Lynn, was charged with profanity and distributing literature within 150 feet of a polling place.

Some few sections reported light openings but officials looked for a rush of votes in the hours before closings.

The lively voting was attributed mainly to the record number of candidates in the field and the intense interest in local contests.

Increase in the call for Democratic ballots was charged to unemployment and other economic conditions.

It was especially noticeable in the precincts of Republican Beacon Hill, where five Democratic voted today for every one who voted in 1928.

Danvers, Winchester, Melrose and other Republican strongholds reported inroads of Democratic votes at nearly the same ratio.

ELY VOTES EARLY

While Gov. Ely was unopposed to head the state ticket for the Democrats, Lt.-William S. Youngman and Frank A. Goodwin, chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, E. Mark Sullivan and Walter E. Brownell, were fighting for gubernatorial nomination on the Republican side.

Gov. Ely voted early in his home precinct in Westfield.

Youngman and Mrs. Youngman were among the early voters at their Brookline polling place.

In addition to the state tickets voters chose their candidates for Governor's Council, Congress, county officials and the legislature.

DAVIS IGNORANT OF LOTTERIES, DEFENSE CONTENDS

MOOSE LODGES CONDUCTED DRAWINGS

Government Witness Says the Senator Had No Connection With Prize Offers

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

New York, Sept. 20 (INS)—Counsel for U. S. Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, on trial for violation of the Federal lottery laws, sought today to show the director general of the Loyal Order of Moose did not promote the $3,000,000 charityy balls for the fraternal order.

The Government contends Senator Davis, running a lottery through the sale of tickets for the affairs, profited personally by at least $172,000.

Donald F. Stewart, editor of the Moose magazine, testified today lodges of the order ran the charity balls.

"I do not know that the Supreme Council had anything to do with them," said Stewart.

OK on MAGAZINE

Stewart, a Government witness, identified letters received from Davis referring to the contents of the magazine.

Copies of the Moose magazine containing stories of the charity balls of 1930 and 1931 were introduced by the Government.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Louis M. Treadwell maintains that Senator Davis okayed the proofs of the order's magazine and therefore must have been cognizant of the charity balls.

Charles J. Margiotti of Pittsburgh, counsel for the defendant, in cross-examination brought out that Davis had not passed upon the proofs of the magazine "for three or four years," and that a reference in a charity ball contained in one letter sent to Stewart by Davis applied to an affair previous to 1930.

Witness further testified that only the charity balls of 1930 and 1931 carried "prizes" with the sale of tickets.

DIVISION OF MONEY

The proceeds from these lotteries according to the government charges were distributed as follows:

To Bernard C. McGuire, professional promoter of lotteries for the Moose, Eagles, Shriners and Knights of Columbus—$150,000.

Three checks, totaling $100,000, drawn to the order of Fred W. Jones, "financial agent," for Senator Davis, with power of attorney. Those checks were deposited in a Pittsburgh bank and used to pay off a personal note of the Senator, it was charged.

Another Jones check for $15,300 was deposited in the personal bank account of Davis.

A check for $17,000 was turned over to the Liberty Bond & Mortgage Company, controlled by Davis.

Forty thousand dollars was deposited in the "organization company," headed by Davis, which has a contract with the fraternal order for the raising of funds.

To these allegations defense counsel reply that all these checks were for debts owed to Davis.

HOOVER
WINSOR McCAY

The Great Emancipator believed in and worked for a "government of the people by the people and for the people." The Great Emancipator was a GREAT Republican.

The "great" Engineer believes in and works for a government of BIG BUSINESS, BY BIG BUSINESS AND FOR BIG BUSINESS. The "great" Engineer is not a Republican. He is an internationalist first, last and always, and therefore not at heart a good American. As he turned the face of Lincoln to the wall at the National Capitol, so will good Americans, real Americans, turn him to the wall in November, as the good Republicans of Maine and other commonwealths have turned him to the wall already, whenever given an opportunity at the polls.

PROWLER FLEES DESPITE WOUND

A search for a prowler, believed wounded by police bullets, aroused Milton residents early today when police surrounded a section in the vicinity of Brook rd. and Central ave.

Described as a Negro, the man was first seen last night by a maid in the rear of the home of Miss Mary Hinckley at 264 Brook rd.

A call to the police brought a detail under Sergt. John B. Shields. While these patrolmen were searching in the vicinity of the Hinckley residence, Patrolman John W. Dalton, drove along Hinckley rd., and saw a man in the bushes. Asked by Dalton, where he was going he dashed toward the bushes on the other side of the street.

Dalton fired three shots, the last one causing the fugitive to slump down on one knee. The man pulled himself up, however, and before Dalton could reach him he disappeared into the tall bushes.

Now comes the ringing declaration of the nation's defenders—the veterans of the great war—TO PRECISELY THE SAME EFFECT.

HOW long will the American people suffer their patience to be abused by the artful, persistent, under-cover agitation by Wall Street and a Wall Street administration for the cancellation of Europe's war debts to the United States?

Never did debts exist which were so binding and so just.

Never was there a creditor so confiding and so generous as this country has been.

Never has the evasion of a debt been attempted by means so unworthy and for motives so sordid.

"ENOUGH"—SAY THE AMERICAN PEOPLE OF THIS PESTILENT PROPAGANDA!

WIEGAND SEES WAR MENACE

New York, Sept. 20 (US)—European peace is endangered by the Franco-British rejection of the Reich's demands for armament equality and by Germany's internal struggle between President Paul Von Hindenburg and Adolf Hitler, fiery Fascist leader.

This warning was sounded last night by Karl H. Von Wiegand, chief foreign correspondent for Universal Service, who spoke over a nationwide radio chain of the National Broadcasting Company from station WEAF.

Von Wiegand pointed out Germany's absence from the disarmament conference may be used as an excuse for its failure while German friendship is turning more and more toward Russia.

Von Wiegand revealed that Germany could train armed forces in Russia, and in 1925 had a secret arrangement with Moscow that never before has been revealed.

WindBlowsChecks From Signer Right to Bank Teller

Kansas City, Sept. 20 (AP)—Henry S. Conrad, attorney, signed two checks in his ninth floor office in a building on the southwest corner of 10th and Walnut sts.

A strong south wind whipped the checks from the hands of his secretary out a window. The secretary telephoned the Commerce Trust Company, on the northwest corner of the same block to stop payment.

An employe of the trust cmopany soon telephoned Mr. Conrad.

"Your checks just blew in through the street door and up to the window of a paying teller," he said. "But we didn't cash them."

SENATOR IN LOTTERY TRIAL

U. S. Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, former Secretary of Labor, as he appears on trial in Federal Court, New York, charged with violation of the anti-lottery law and conspiracy. It is alleged he received $172,000 as his share of a $3,000,000 lottery run by the Loyal Order of Moose, of which he is a director. Under a new federal law the jury is composed of 12 regular and two alternate members. (International News Photos.)

165 MILLION IN RACKETS IN CHICAGO

Yearly Cost Equals Amount Used for Running the City Government

Washington, Sept. 20 (INS)—Racketeering costs Chicago alone $165,000,000 a year, as much as it costs to run the city government, Gordon L. Hostetter, executive director of the Chicago Employers' Association, told today's session of the national conference in government at its 38th annual convention here.

"Rackets" have so eaten their way into American industrial and commercial life, he said, that there is scarcely a commodity for sale which does not cost more because of racketeers.

AN INSIDE JOB

"It is by no means an invasion of alien criminals who, by sheer force of numbers, by capacity for violence and by cunning in devilish devices extort from business and the public a criminal tribute," he said. "It is an inside job and a native product, for which business itself is greatly to blame."

Hostetter said the true racket has four elements—the business man, business group or association, the leader or leaders of organized labor, the criminal underworld and the politicians. The combnation of the four elements into collusive agreements is the true "racket."

"It is an astounding fact that at one time in Chicago there there were 165 rackets of the character described." Hostetter charged. "This means, of course, that at least that many lines of human endeavor were being operated by and controlled through conspiracy.

MANY CITIES HIT

"There is no line of endeavor in Chicago which is not now or has not at some time felt the pernicious effect of racketeering, directly or indirectly. New York, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, the Twin Cities, Denver, Los Angeles, have experienced it, and at this very hour can feel the grips of rackets tightening on the throats of various trades and lines of industry."

HOOVER AT WORK ON TOUR PLANS

Washington, Sept. 20 (US)—President Hoover today began marshaling the best orators in the Republican party to personally lead them in a swing of the country in an effort to sweep the party to victory.

President Hoover will make a number of speeches. Calvin Coolidge, former president, will make at least one. Members of the cabinet and leaders of the Senate and the House are to be enlisted in the Republican oratorical army.

The president began perfecting plans for the nation-wide drive following a night conference with party leaders. The "Four Horsemen" of the cabinet, Secretaries Hyde, Mills, Doak and Hurley, are to go into the field immediately.

Mills announced he expects to speak in Detroit Sept. 28, St. Louis, Sept. 30; Los Angeles, Oct. 3 and 4; San Francisco, Oct. 6, and probably in Chicago on his way back from California.

SHERWOOD QUIZ ANGERS WALKER

Naples, Italy, Sept. 20 (AP)—Mention of the name of Russell Sherwood evoked a spirited reply from former Mayor James J. Walker of New York when he arrived here today aboard the steamer Conte Grande.

"I expected that," he said, when told it was rumored he would meet Sherwood in Italy. "Didn't I testify twice under oath on the witness stand that I did not know where Sherwood was? Do you think I would lay myself open to perjury charges like that?"

Walker was the last passenger off the boat. He spent almost an hour dressing and looked smart in a gray double-breasted suit. The other passengers had gone their way several hours before.

The former mayor will go to Rome tomorrow or Thursday to meet an old friend, Monsignor Joseph Breslin, vice-rector of the American College.

GAR WOOD GOES 124.91 IN HOUR

Algonac, Mich., Sept. 20—Roaring down the St. Clair river through a punishing rain that hammered on the boat's hull like bullets, Gar Wood today drove his mighty Miss America X to a new world speed record of 124.91 statute miles an hour.

True to his proud prediction that the Miss America would prove the fastest boat ever built, Wood smashed the record established by Kaye Don's Miss England III and returned the water championship to America.

Kaye Don's record was 119.75 miles an hour, established in Scotland on July 18.

Plane Lands in Desert

Bagdad, Irak, Sept. 20 (AP)—Word received here today said a French air liner flying to Cochin, French Indo-China, had been wrecked in the middle of the desert, 80 miles east of Rutbah, during a sand storm. There were no details.

WHITNEY CALLS FOR PAYMENT OF BONUS

Robert L. Bacon's Opponent Proposes a Nation-Wide Plan to Stop Graft

Garden City, N. Y., Sept. 20 (AP) — Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Democratic candidate for the House seat now held by his personal friend, Robert L. Bacon, Republican, today urged immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus, taking a view directly opposite to that of Bacon, who is seeking re-election.

Outlining a campaign speech he will make tonight, Whitney said, nevertheless that those who are gainfully employed should not receive the bonus. He is the son of the late Harry Payne Whitney.

Bacon has asserted that if he must vote for the bonus, he would prefer not to be re-elected.

WOULD BAR GRAFTERS

"I propose," Whitney said, "that in every assembly district or other similar political sub-division in the country a board of patriotic citizens be formed to receive the applications from needy veterans.

"To such veterans as are certified by these boards, I favor immediate payment of the bonus which, now, they must wait until 1945 to collect.

"I would further charge these boards with the duty of reporting instances of unfairness and graft where such are discovered in existing practices of the veteran's administration, so that the public may know the facts."

FOR BEER AND WINE

He said that five per cent beer and ten per cent wine should be immediately legalized and taxed in every state whose laws do not forbid and that a portion of this revenue should be devoted to the bonus payment.

Whitney, who is making his political debut, is a grandson of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt and of the late William C. Whitney, secretary of the navy under President Cleveland.

METHODISTS IN CHURCH UNION

London, Sept. 20 (AP)—The United Methodist Church, largest Protestant organization in the World, was created this afternoon in Albert Hall by a ceremony which attracted 10,000 representatives from many nations to witness the union of the three branches of the church.

The Duke of York, representing the King, welcomed the delegates.

"This union of Methodist churches marks the opening of a new era in the life of one of the greatest spiritual forces of the modern world," he said. "Indeed, I doubt if there is any movement which had made more rapid strides since its inception in the 18th century than has Methodism."

GARNER DUE TO SPEAK HERE

New York, Sept. 20—Speaker Garner is expected by Democratic campaign managers to make two campaign addresses in the Middle West and two in the East.

The vice-presidential nominee will come to New York to map his stumping tour and to confer with his running mate after Governor Roosevelt returns from his swing across the country.

A tentative speaking program for Garner was announced by one of his aides. It includes an address in New England, one in Pennsylvania, one in St. Louis and one in the Middle West corn belt.

A report from those in charge of the drive for campaign funds was that many more small contributions had been coming in since the Maine election.

The United States public health service proves that mice, ordinarily susceptible to cancer, can be made immune by inoculation.

The female mice develop immunity readily, and the immunizing operation is performed curiously. The mice are inoculated with cancer in their tails, and after the cancer tumors develop, they are cut off with the tails. Those thus treated become immune. Treatment for human beings is far away, but science is gradually working toward success.

Solemn-faced men governing Russia smile when France begins "talks" about seeking "an assured petroleum base" in Russia in return for friendly relations between Russia and France.

Russians know well what the petroleum base means. In war, petroleum is more precious than gold. Tanks and airplanes must move; petroleum supplies power. The Russians know that France is expecting trouble with Germany, much sooner than it will probably come.

New York city, like a very big snowball, grows more rapidly than the rest of the country. Since 1890 the percentage of increase in New York has been 50 per cent greater than throughout the whole nation, although Manhattan, heart of New York, has been losing steadily to other boroughs. In the last hundred years the Bronx population has multiplied 15 times. Brooklyn and Queens have doubled themselves twice.

The "foreign white stock" is changing. Dr. Walter Laidlaw, secretary of the city's census committee, says that by 1940 the white stock of Russian birth or parentage, alone, will outnumber the entire white stock of native parentage. In 30 years Negro population in New York has increased almost 300,000.

All this will make the "Noble Nordics" weep. But, if they will refuse to have babies, what can they expect.

Paulette Goddard Linked in Romance With Chaplin

Paulette Goddard

Hollywood, Sept. 20 — Whether there's going to be a new Mrs. Charlie Chaplin was something the best minds in film circles were pondering today.

And all because the celebrated comedian didn't go to bed last night. Instead he remained up until dawn in order to bid a fond farewell to Paulette Goddard, the platinum blonde movie actress with whom he has been seen frequently of late, when she departed for New York by plane.

Before that, Chaplin gave a dinner party at his Beverly Hills home for the actress.

Boardman to Follow Aviation as Business

Russell Boardman

Mattapoisett, Sept. 20—Despite the serious injuries he received in a plane crash in Springfield five weeks ago, Russell Boardman, co-holder of the world's long distance flying record, will still follow aviation as a trade.

For the first time the famous flier appeared on the streets here, yesterday, after a two-weeks' convalessence in his Mattapoisett summer home.

"Flying is my business and I'm going to continue in it," he told newspapermen. He was obviously haggard and shaken from his long internment in the hospital.

He has been assured he will suffer no permanent effects from his injuries.

Kemal Seeks Reform of Turkish Language

Pres. Kemal

Istanbul, Sept. 20—President Mustapha Kemal of Turkey plans another reform, this time that of the language of his people.

With the view of purifying the Turkish language the President has called for a language congress to be held at the end of this month. Persian and Arabic words which for centuries have formed a large part of the language will give way to ancient Turkish words, unused for just as long.

When the congress has made its choice the government will force the people to employ the newly-instituted words by refusing to accept any communications employing those words cast out.

Advances in China Listed by Jensen

Capt. Jensen

Seattle, Sept. 20—Although China judged from afar seems completely overcast by clouds of uncertainty and storms of controversy, Capt. M. M. Jensen of the President Taft, now in port here, can point to advances that country is making.

"Many individual Chinese cities and provinces are showing a high civic spirit and hopefulness for the future despite national political uncertainty," Jensen said.

"Shanmenwan, coastal port of Chekiang province, is developing its shipping facilities by constructing wharves and godowns; is establishing steamer connections with Shanghai and Foochow and is building a radio station."

JOAN M'DONALD A BRIDE

JOAN MacDONALD DR. MacKINNON

JOAN M'DONALD WED IN ENGLAND

Wendover, Buckinghamshire, Eng., Sept. 20 (AP)—The little Congregational Church in this picturesque village was packed to its capacity of 400 today when Dr. Joan MacDonald, daughter of the prime minister, was married to a fellow student of her college days in Edinburgh, Dr. Alastair MacKinnon.

Her father came over from his country place at Chequers and gave the bride away. It was a great occasion for the village people.

A streamer hung across the High street, bearing the words "Good Wishes." The school children, who were given a holiday, lined the roadway to the church and cheered the wedding party.

Ishbel MacDonald, the bride's sister, was mistress of ceremonies. There were four bridesmaids.

FATE OF RUTH AWAITS SPRING

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 20 (INS)—Winnie Ruth Judd, convicted "trunk murderess," probably will not know whether she must hang until next spring.

Her appeal from conviction was on file today with the State Supreme Court, but a hearing on the case is not likely to come up until January.

Meanwhile, shut away from the world, the so-called "tiger woman" is gaining weight and the tautly drawn nerves which resulted in several outbreaks during her trial have quieted under the routine of the Arizona State prison at Florence.

IGNORES PLEAS OF FRIENDS TO ABANDON PLAN

Refuses to Leave His Cell or Accept Britain's Willingness to Let Him Go

Bombay, Sept. 20 (INS)—Despite the pleas of his friends, Mahatma Gandhi, Hindu 'Saint, began at noon today the fast by which he hopes to starve to death.

Gandhi remained in the Yeravda jail in Poona as the fast started, but British government officials said he was free to receive visitors or to leave the prison whenever he wished.

His decision to die so that the world might take notice of India's plight remained unshaken although a deputation of Bombay Hindus argued with him in his cell for three hours, urging him not to make a move that may plunge India into more trouble.

The Mahatma has refused to leave his cell or to accept the British government's offer of conditional release. In response to this offer he replied that only by force could they remove him.

TO DEFY DEATH

The Mahatma, in protest against Britain's communal elections scheme for India's religiously divided population, plans to eat nothing, confining himself to water, with or without salt or soda.

Nevertheless, he hopes to prolong his fast unto death for as long as possible, so that the world's attention may be secured for India's plight by his protracted, self-imposed martyrdom.

The British government of India was reticent regarding plans to counteract Gandhi's fast, though it was denied that secret forceful feeding would be utilized.

Government officials said Gandhi would not be removed from his prison cell, despite reports Viceroy Earl Willingdon would order him taken to a private residence.

Nor will the government capitulate to Gandhi's demand for his unconditional release, it was stated, for fear that without restrictions, he might infuse new life into the civil disobedience campaign.

It was believed by many that Prime Minister MacDonald and other British officials will be unable to hold out against the pressure of world opinion that Gandhi's dramatic protest is likely to arouse.

These persons, awed by the Mahatma's influence over many millions of India's teeming hordes, believed it probable Great Britain may have to revise the electoral plan and even grant India increased self-government.

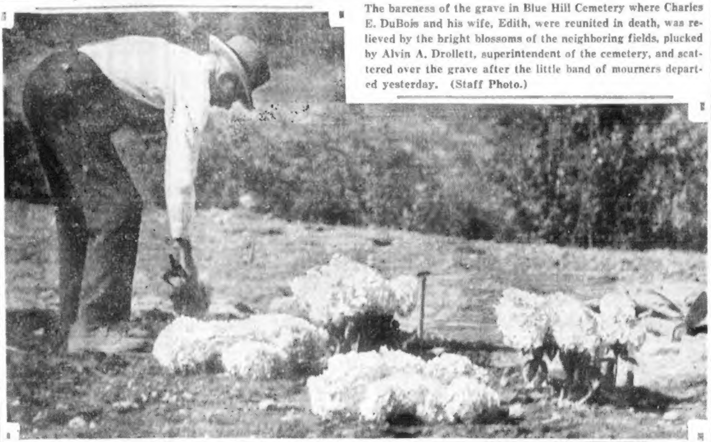
SON TO JOIN HIM

The Mahatma was cheered by news that his son, M. M. Gandhi, editor of the publication "Indian Opinion" in Durban, South Africa, had left for India to be with his father during his fast.

Gandhi is 62. Most of his life has been spent in turmoil. But in spite of it he has seemed to remain entirely calm.

Once a prosperous lawyer in India and South Africa, he has lived like a beggar since he took up the leadership of the cause of civil disobedience in India. He has gone about, even in the damp and chill streets of London winter, in his loin cloth of white wool, made by himself. He has given all his money and property to the poor.

Except for his loin cloth, he goes about quite naked.



The bareness of the grave in Blue Hill Cemetery where Charles E. DuBois and his wife, Edith, were reunited in death, was relieved by the bright blossoms of the neighboring fields, plucked by Alvin A. Drollett, superintendent of the cemetery, and scattered over the grave after the little band of mourners departed yesterday. (Staff Photo.)

SHOTS FIRED AT SOVIET CHIEF

Warsaw, Sept. 20 (INS)—An attempt was made today to assassinate Michael Tuchatchevsky, Soviet vice-commissar of war, as the Moscow-Berlin express was passing through Minsk, according to the Polish Telegraph Agency.

Two shots were fired through the window of the special car occupied by Tuchatchevsky and six Russian officers en route to Germany to view Reichswehr maneuvers.

No one was injured.

$230,000 FOR HUB NAVY YARD

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—The navy today announced plans for a $10,000,000 construction program authorized by the relief act passed by Congress to aid the employment situation.

The largest expenditure, $1,600,000, will be for buildings and equipment at the naval hospital in Philadelphia.

The second largest item is $550,000 for the New York navy yard.

Other allocations include:

Navy yard, Portsmouth, N. H., improvement of power plant $250,000.

Navy yard, Boston, Mass., improvement of distributing systems $75,000; water front $105,000; power plant $50,000; total $230,000.

Newport, R. I., improvement of rifle range $50,000; bridge to Coddington Point $75,000; extension of main building at War College $360,000; water main at Torpedo station $14,000; power cable, Goat Island $7000.

6 FIRES SET IN BREEN'S HOME

Fire, which was set in six different places according to State Fire Inspector John Riordan, swept the home of David J. ("Beano") Breen at 169-171 Fenno st., Wollaston, today, causing loss estimated to $4000.

Riordan called on the state police chemist to make a scientific examination of spots where he believes gasoline had been poured, and he predicted an early arrest.

Investigation also revealed, according to the state inspector, that neighbors who telephoned the fire alarm were originally awakened by the starting of an auto which sped away as they looked into the street. They then saw the fire.

Breen, who has frequently been in the limelight because of equity court tussles with Police Commissioner Hultman, over raids on property formerly owned by him on Tremont st., occupied the second floor but has recently been living elsewhere. The first floor was vacant.

Breen is said to be on a vacation in Maine.

Triplets and Baby Brother Offered for Adoption

Vandergrift, Pa., Sept. 20 (INS)—Do you like babies? Here's a fourfold answer to your prayer.

Faced with financial difficulties, Mrs. Samuel Serena, mother of Vandergrift's only triplets, notified International News Service today she was offering her triplets, 21 months old, and their month-old baby brother for adoption.

The triplets are two boys, "identical twins," and a girl somewhat different in appearance than her brothers.

Giant Watermelon on Way to Farley

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, today awaited delivery of what he was informed was the world's largest watermelon, sent him as a gift by the Hope, Ark., Chamber of Commerce. Notification that the giant melon would arrive today gave its weight as 166 pounds.

WIDOW SHOOTS SELF; IS DYING

Springfield, Sept. 20—Rising from her bed, Mrs. Elsie E. Tartter, 27, a widow, shot herself through the abdomen today at her home in Hancock st., and is dying at Mercy Hospital.

The sound of the shot, fired from a 22-calibre rifle, awakened Mrs. Kay O'Malley of Cleveland st., Arlington, who had been spending the night with Mrs. Tartter. She told police Mrs. Tartter, who had been crippled since birth, had been despondent.

"I've always wanted to do it," the widow moaned on the way to the hospital.

Worker Badly Hurt as Plane Hits Him

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Sept. 20 (AP)—Michael Martis, who was hit by a falling plane while at work in the state tree nursery plantation, is in a hospital with a fractured skull and broken nose.

Three fliers escaped with minor injuries when the plane fell 1000 feet.

BILLY MINSKY RANTS IN VAIN PROTESTS

New Mayor Acts on Charges of Police Head Against Form of Entertainment

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS

International News Service Staff Correspondent

New York, Sept. 20 (INS)—No longer will Fatima, the jingling of glass beads and the clanking of brass bracelets heralding her approach, glide upon the stage with lithesome gyrations and sinuous wriggles, practically panic the bald headed first row gentleman.

No longer will a red noseo comedian, in baggy clothes and enormous shoes, lean over the footlights to ask the audience confidentially, "Didja ever hear the one about . . ."

In vain, Billy Minsky, high lord of burlesque, ranted today and rushed to a lawyer's office to stop enforcement of Mayor McKee's decree of banishment.

MINSKY'S PROTEST

"My shows," Minsky said, "are as decent as any Broadway musical show. I give them Broadway revues at popular prices and I've seen lots of stuff in $8.80 shows I wouldn't think of using on my stage."

For several months business, theatrical and religious organizations have waged a war against Minsky and his two burlesque houses, the Republic and the Empire. Friends of burlesque whisper that jealousy aroused by the success of Minsky has had something to do with the protest of Broadway against the art that features ladies of generous avoirdupois and not so generous dress.

Mayor McKee, in closing Broadway's two burlesque houses, acted at the instigation of Police Commissioner Edward Mulvooney, who declared that they were "breeding places of crime which offered filthy entertainment."

BUSINESS MEN PLEASED

Business men with shops near the two theaters were pleased. They said:

"People who go to burlesque shows are not people who will spend much dough. They will look in our shop windows but will not bring a buck 'nside to spend. People who go to legitimate shows will."

MAINE ELECTION PROBE STARTS IN AROOSTOOK

Houlton, Me., Sept. 20 (INS)—Twenty investigators from the Attorney-General's department were in Aroostook County today seeking depositions from officials in charge of 10 voting precincts in last Monday's election, in which a Democratic Governor and two Democratic congressmen were elected.

Aroostook county is part of the third district in which John G. Utterback, Democratic congressional candidate, defeated former Governor Ralph O. Brewster, Republican.

DIFFERENCE IN VOTES

The county gave Utterback a majority of 354. Burleigh Martin, defeated Republican gubernatorial candidate, carried Aroostook by 1378 against Gov.-Elect Louis J. Brann.

Atty.-Gen. Clement F. Robinson and United States Commissioner Richard K. Goure, chief investigator, declined to reveal the object of the move.

Ten towns were under scrutiny, composed largely of a French-Canadian population.

WHEN BREWSTER WON

While former Gov. Brewster denied he had asked for an investigation and said it was instigated "solely on the motion of the attorney-general," it was recalled that several of these precincts were under investigation by the attorney-general in 1924. At that time Brewster, a candidate for governor, was apparently defeated by 320 votes by Frank Farrington of Augusta.

Brewster took his fight to the Supreme Court for a recount on the ground that voters along the St. John river had been dictated to at the polls. The court ruled in his favor and he was announced a winner by 581 votes.

Welfare List Cut

Fall River, Sept. 20—Further decrease in welfare cases of 163 for last week, bringing the total down to 3393, was reported by officials.

Race Is Too Close, Man Refuses to Cast Ballot

The ultimate in friendship was displayed by a voter in Convention Hall, St. Botolph st., Back Bay, today when he declined to cast a ballot because the contest was too close.

The close fight for Republican representative was explained to him by Dr. Seth F. Arnold, former councillor and representative.

"I'm a friend of all and I'm afraid my vote might cause a difference, then," said the man as he departed.

No amount of persuasion could effect his return.

The Republican candidates are Charles J. Innis, Perley Dyar Chase and George Demeter.

SMITH WAITING FOR STATE MEET

New York, Sept. 20 (INS)—Alfred E. Smith will remain silent on both state and national politics until the Democratic state convention opens in Albany, Oct. 3, it was reported today.

The former Governor has fixed his schedule so that he will not give his views on situations involving any specific candidates until the gavel opens the convention, it was understood.

When the New Outlook, of which Smith is editor, appears Oct. 1, it was believed he will deliver some of his views on more general aspects of the battle between the Republican and Democratic parties.

Smith's program was made known simultaneously with an announcement of John N. Garner's tentative schedule of addresses in key cities. Garner is expected to speak in New England, the Mid-West and California. Dates and cities for Garner's tour were not announced.

TRIPLE PROBE LOOMS IN DOLE VOTE CHARGE

Charges that welfare aid recipients were ordered to work at polling booths today for James H. Brennan, congressional candidate in Charlestown, awaited action today by Chairman Simon E. Hecht of the welfare department, Dist. Atty. William J. Foley and U. S. Atty. Frederick H. Tarr.

The charges were made by Frank Gaffney, secretary to Congressman John J. Douglass, who is opposing Brennan for the nomination, and they were supported by an affidavit from James Davis of Polk st., Charlestown, a welfare recipient.

Davis alleged in his affidavit that he sweeps streets two days a week for his $7 weekly dole, but that in return for his work for Brennan ordered at the polls, he would be relieved from two days of street sweeping this week.

Davis' affidavit named Henry P. Murphy, consulting visitor of the welfare department, as the man who ordered him to the polls, and declared that similar orders were given to 10 dole recipients, covering every polling place in Brennan's district.

Murphy, who lives in the same house with Brennan in Monument ave., Charlestown, heatedly denied the charges, but they were given to the authorities, nevertheless.

A hitch in the investigations came today, when Chairman Hecht, while admitting he had read the charges in the newspapers, said he had received no official notification and could not act until this had come to him.

Complaint was made, also, to Elections Commissioner Peter F. Tague, but he said the matter was out of his jurisdiction.

ROOSEVELT IS IN NORTHWEST

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 20 (INS)—Gov. Roosevelt invaded the Pacific Northwest today, the first Democratic presidential nominee in many years to make a personal bid for the electoral votes of this far corner of the United States.

All of today will be spent in Washington, tomorrow in Oregon. Then the Democratic nominee turns south along the coast.

Only one Democratic presidential candidate carried Washington since the turn of the century. Woodrow Wilson did it in 1916 on his "he kept us out of war" platform but with that single exception the Chinook State has remained steadfast to the Republican banner.

CURLEY PLACES SLUMP BLAME ON HOOVER

Salt Lake City, Sept. 20 (AP)—Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, in an address here last night, placed the blame for the present depression on President Hoover and asserted it was time "to put a man in the White House who will stay on the job, forget Europe for a while and do something for the United States."

Mr. Curley, touring the West in the interests of the candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee, termed the Republican administration "the most helpless and hopeless" in the history of the nation.

"ALL AID TO EUROPE"

"President Hoover," he said, "has, during his entire encumbency in office devoted the resources of America to the salvation of foreign nations, in order that foreign nations might be protected and their citizens employed. The monies needed for the operation of American industries and for the employment of American workers have been diverted in a golden stream to Europe."

Mayor Curley criticised the eviction of the bonus marchers from Washington, but expressed no opinion as to the justice of the demand for immediate cash payment of the bonus.

SMITH'S "OBLIGATION"

Of the prospect of Alfred E. Smith entering the campaign in active support of Roosevelt, the mayor said:

"I have no way of knowing what Mr. Smith is going to do but, as Daniel Webster once wrote, duty is an obligation that is inescapable. And this time there is more than an obligation of friendship. There is an obligation to save the nation from the incompetence which has plunged it into despair."

Joseph A. Conry, former Congressman from Massachusetts, who is accompanying Mayor Curley on his tour, gave a brief talk. He predicted Massachusetts would go Democratic.

Selling Halted as Farm Strike Spreads

Worthington, Minn., Sept. 20 (AP)—One Minnesota County and 30 of North Dakota's 53 had become "active sectors" today in the "strike" of northwest farmers for higher prices for their products.

The sale of non-perishables has been ordered halted indefinitely in North Dakota by backers of the "strike."

DEMOCRATS SHOW GAINS IN BIG RUSH TO THE POLLS

at the Boston polling booths found large details of uniformed police on duty as well as a number of plain clothesmen on the watch for any attempt at illegal voting.

The first charges of padded voting lists came from Somerville where Rep. James E. Hagan (D.) asked the governor's office for a detail of state police. Hagan alleged that he had detected at least 150 irregular names on the lists in the five precincts in Ward 2 of that city.

A lively tilt developed in the polling place, Tremont and Brookline sts., South End, when a worker accused another worker of emphasizing "Democrat" in his queries to independent voters. The warden halted it with orders for equal emphasis on queries as to parties.

INVOKE OLD LAW

The first complaint to reach the election commission was a protest against Lena B. Clark as a precinct worker in Ward 4, Precinct 5, on the grounds she was a candidate for delegate to the Republican state convention. The commission ruled it was not strictly an elective office and she might continue.

The commission invoked an old election law whereby precinct officers were required to announce the height as well as the name of each applicant for a ballot.

It reported no hitch in the delivery of ballots to the polling places. Officers were ready for work at 7 a. m., an hour before the opening, the commissioners said.

Fair weather aided the outside workers and enabled many to reach the polls that ordinarily would have stayed away.

Officers who reported "light" votes pointed out that numerical returns were nearly the same and was really a heavier vote than in other years because the opening hours had been changed from 6 a. m. to 8 a. m. in Boston.

Along the North Shore, voters were interested principally in the contest of four aspirants against Sheriff Frank E. Raymond of Essex County.

HEAVY IN MANY PLACES

Three hot contests for legislative nominations in the 9th, 10th and 11th Essex districts also drew the voters out.

Medford election officials predicted a vote of 70 per cent before tonight's closing, an exceptional percentage for a primary.

Everett polled its usual heavy morning vote, as did Melrose, Malden, where all its legislative representatives seek return to office, started light but expects a rush in the after supper hours until the 8 p. m. close.

In the first few hours in Winchester nearly twice as many votes were cast as in the same period of 1928.

Ward 7 in Newton recorded 402 votes in the first three hours, a number equal to the first five hours in the last primary. Again a Republican stronghold showed an increase in the call for Democratic ballots.

Braintree reported slow voting in the first hour, but the officials were rushed until a slack came at noon.

Goodwin, Lt.-Gov. Youngman's chief contender, conducted a forceful campaign, but a defeat today for Youngman would be the outstanding surprise of the primary. Sullivan, who has made a plea chiefly for liberalization of the ticket, is expected to garner a big vote. Brownell is rated as a bad fourth.

Like Governor Ely, State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, Democrat, and Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook and Atty-Gen. Joseph E. Warner, Republicans with no opponents, are renominated.

BACON SEEN AS WINNER

The battle of votes in the Republican primary for lieutenant governor is expected to return Bacon as winner by a comfortable margin.

Prescott, son-in-law of Frank W. Stearns, Boston merchant and intimate of Calvin Coolidge, is picked for a win over Senator Ulin.

Former Lt. Gov. Barry apparently will be nominated in the Democratic contest for lieutenant governor. Of his seven opponents, John E. Swift, of Milford and Mayor Michael O'Neill, of Everett, are rated as runners-up.

In the Republican contest for state auditor, Cook is considered as an easy victor over Coldwell.

State Auditor Hurley is conceded to have a fair chance for the Democratic renomination, and in the same party, the fight for the nomination for secretary of state seems to lie between George Gilbody, Dr. Joseph Santosuosso and Arthur G. Flynn.

State Senator Buckley is the favorite in the field for the Democratic nomination for attorney genearl.

In the superior court clerkship fight, Prendible is picked to win with Mulvey in second place. Prendible is popular, has a clean record, the respect of the judiciary and has the support of Martin Lomasney.

Sheriff Keliher is expected to win handily over his chief opponent, Councillor Dowd. Congressman John J. Douglass of East Boston, one of the Smith delegates to the national convention, is regarded as a winner over Councillor Brennan, of Charlestown.

Robinson Uses Hillbilly Songs to Lure Votes

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 20 (AP)—Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic floor leader, is going Senator Long of Louisiana one better in the show business as a part of political campaigns.

Long came to Arkansas during the summer to campaign for Senator Caraway and brought trucks equipped with phonographs and amplifying devices.

They hurried hither and yon over the countryside and heralded the Louisiana "Kingfish's" coming with merry tunes.

Senator Robinson prefers performers in person. Consequently, he has taken "the original Arkansas hillbillies" on a 10-day speaking tour of the State in behalf of the Democratic national campaign.

Workers at Polls Cut to $5 Each

Economic conditions have dealt the precinct workers a sad, sad blow.

Since the war the boys who are paid by the candidates to get out the vote have collected a $10 bill for the services on primary day, and another $10 on election day.

But the price today is $5 and there is no dearth of workers.

Lewiston Strikers Move to Arbitrate

Lewiston, Me., Sept. 20 (AP)—As the strike of Lewiston and Auburn shoeworkers entered its seventh day today, leaders of the more than 3000 idle employes put forward a proposal for negotiation of the dispute.

Sidney Norton, British subject, who was elected chairman of the strikers' executive committee, said his followers would vote later today on a proposal to appoint an arbitration committee of five citizens.

Youth Arrested as He Quits Deer Isle

Howard N. W. F. McIntosh, 19, of West Cottage st., Roxbury, was arrested at Deer Island House of Correction today by Deputy U. S. Marshal Winston, charged with violating his probation in a federal case.

McIntosh is wanted in Ashland, Va., where he was given a suspended sentence of two years for transporting a stolen auto from Roxbury.

Candidate Has Bar Raided as Rival Buys Gin Votes

The boys were whooping it up in a speakeasy in Washington st., Charlestown, today, pausing ever and anon to lubricate their vocal chords with the forbidden juice that puts wings on a man's tongue and an anchor on his brain.

There was one name spoken louder than all the rest, and with reverence and gratitude was it spoken. It was the name of one of the many candidates for office in Ward 2.

A rival candidate heard the name, and frothingly fared forth to the polling place in a school close by.

There he observed his rival for office giving the boys a knowing look and a significant whisper. And the boys who had done right by the candidate entered the speakeasy to refresh themselves after their hard day's vote.

The rival rushed to a phone and notified Federal authorities. In less time than it takes to say "Set 'em up again," six dry agents swooped down on the speakeasy.

A man giving the name of John Sweeney, Raven st., Dorchester, was seized as the dispenser of drinks, and hustled off before Commissioner Jenney, who held him in $1000 for possession of liquor and destroying evidence.

As soon as the presence of the officers became known, a dozen Paul Reveres rushed out to notify other dispensers of alcoholic syrups that the Feds were coming.

Dry agents are scattered about the city and will keep a close eye on all happy voters.

News From Ward Fights

The contest between Prendible and Mulvey for clerk of the Superior Court is the feature battle in East Boston, interest being even greater than that in the fight between Cong. Douglass and James H. Brennan for Congress.

Sentiment in Noddle Island seemed to favor Mulvey, although a close vote is expected. Douglass was expected to win here, his home district.

In the Republican primaries, interest was centered in the vote for Governor. East Boston is Frank Goodwin's old home, and he was expected to collect the majority of Republican votes here over William S. Youngman and E. Mark Sullivan.

An expected early morning rush to the polls in this section which comprises the greater part of Charlestown failed to develop during the first two hours, despite the spirited contest for the House and Senate.

Out of a total of 12,141 registered voters only 480 men and women had visited the polling places in the district during the first two opening hours.

WARD 3

Martin Lomasney cast his vote at Bulfinch st. church early today so that he would have plenty of time to get out the full vote of his bailiwick.

Sherif Keliher and his wife cast their votes at 10:15 a. m. at the ward room in Blossom st.

William M. Prendible voted before going to his office in the superior court and expressed confidence he would be nominated.

The voting in Precincts 1 and 2 was heaviest at an early hour.

WARD 4

Women predominated in the early hours of heavy voting in this ward. A heavy influx of Democratic votes wes seen, with workers for Cornelius T. Scanlon, Democrat, especially active. The Republican contest for Representative evolved around an attempt by Perlie Dyar Chase to break the so-called "Innes slate" of Charles J. Innes and George Demeter.

WARD 5

Society voters of Beacon Hill were out early in great numbers today for the primaries. The surprising feature was the unprecedented call for Democratic ballots in this Republican stronghold.

WARD 6

The voting during the early hours was very light. Only a few women appeared to cast their ballots.

WARD 9

Shortly after the polls opened a dispute arose in the polling place of Precinct 1 at Tremont and Brookline sts. between precinct workers. One worker accused another of overemphasizing the word Democratic to independent voters and those whose party designations did not appear on the voting list.

The warden ordered the designations Republican and Democrat to be uttered with the same amount of emphasis, thus ending a dispute.

WARD 11

Edward P. Barry, Democratic candidate for lieutenant-governor, was one of the first voters at the polls in Ward 11. He cast his ballot shortly after 8 o'clock. The early vote was light.

WARD 12

Ward 12 voters are taking plenty of time to think over the qualifications of the various candidates, it appears, fewer than 150 votes having been cast there in the first four hours.

WARD 15

There was a great deal of activity in this ward because of the fight being made by City Councillor Francis E. Kelly for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant-governor. Kelly's workers were out in force and were getting out a good-sized vote.

WARDS 13, 14, 16, 17, 18

The voting in all these wards during the early hours was unusually light. There was a scattering of women voters but for the most part the fair voters were not much interested.

WARD 19

Gasper Bacon, Republican candidate for lieutenant-governor, was one of the few early voters in Ward 19. He and Mrs. Bacon arrived at the polling place at 9 o'clock.

WARD 20

In spite of the fact that there are 13 Democratic candidates running for the nomination for representative in Ward 20, the vote up to noon was very light. There were more workers on hand than voters.

WARD 21

Two of the Republican candidates for Governor, E. Mark Sullivan and Frank A. Goodwin, residents of Ward 21, accompanied by their wives, were early voters today. Sullivan voted from Precinct 16 and Goodwin from Precinct 15.

WARD 22

The heaviest vote in years is expected today in Ward 22, where the feature contest in the primaries is the fight for the Democratic nomination for representative between Leo Birmingham and John A. Brennan. The early vote was heavy, with workers for both candidates determined to get out every vote.

DEERY SOUGHT IN BANK PROBE

Salem police began a search today for John A. Deery, president of the closed Salem Trust Co., to summons him before the Essex County grand jury, which today began an investigation of the bank's affairs.

Seven officers and directors of the bank were served with summonses yesterday, but Deery was not located and today his wife said he had not been home over night. She said he had no idea he was to be summoned and that he had gone away yesterday with a theater executive, but that she expected him home.

The grand jury proceedings started while the search was still in progress.

Boston Leader Calls Upon Masons to Fight U. S. Foes

Indianapolis, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Masonic fraternity was called on today by Leon M. Abbott of Boston, sovereign commander, to combat what he said is an attempt "to destroy those sacred ideals on which our nation was founded and which have brought happiness, progress and prosperity to our country."

The appeal was made by Abbott in closing his address at the opening of the 120th annual meeting of the Supreme Council, Thirty-third Degree, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite for the Northern Jurisdiction of the United States.

"Those who are alert and wide-awake, realize that in our country today there are corrupting, inboring and destructive influences at work, deliberately engaged in the attempt to destroy those sacred ideals," Abbott said.

"These enemies, in various guises and disguises, in numerour and subtle ways, are spreading the seeds of unrest and revolution. It is the stern duty of every member of the Masonic fraternity to put on his whole armor and to use the last measure of his strength and influence in combatting and destroying these enemies."

The ceremonies of the opening of the annual meeting were held with practically all the active members of the council from 15 states present.

87,000 Enrolled in Schools of Capital

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—Approximately 87,000 were back in classes in capital schools today, a substantial increase over last year.

Enrollment day saw 76,155 register for elementary, junior high schools, vocational schools and teachers' colleges.

Eugene Pallette, Film Comic, Weds

Hollywood, Sept. 20 (AP)—The marriage of Eugene Pallette, 43, rotund comedy character of films, and Marjorie Cagnacci, 32, of Ventura, Cal., Sunday at the home of the bride's parents, was revealed today.

HOOVER OUT OF ARMS DISPUTE

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—President Hoover today issued a statement saying that the United States was divorced from what he termed "the German arms question," but said this country was "anxious that Germany shall continue to participate in the arms conference."

The President referred to press dispatches from abroad, and it was assumed by his aides he referred to reports that Sen. Reed of Pa. and Ambassador Edge had informed French authorities the American people believed Germany's recent move for armament equality was inopportune.

Boy Admits Taking 21 Autos in Malden

Bonds of $2000 were ordered for Louis M. Dulong, 19, of Linwood st., Malden, charged with misappropriating 21 autos in Malden. Police expect to arrest three others within a day or two.

DUBOIS FEARED WIFE'S GHOST, SAYS MAN WHO BARED CASE

Afraid to Stay at Camp Alone, Heinlein Reveals

By BERT FORD

Benjamin Heinlein, a South Braintree plumber, first to set the authorities on the trail of Charles DuBois, tells in an exclusive interview in the Boston Evening American today how it felt to charge his friend with wife-murder on sheer suspicion.

Actuated by what he termed "a citizen's plain duty," Heinlein saw his worst suspicions swiftly substantiated by the suicide of DuBois and finding of Mrs. DuBois' body in a cement crypt in the cellar of their Plymouth cottage.

FEARED "GHOST"

Heinlein makes public for the first time that DuBois, long a believer in spiritualism, feared he would be hounded by his wife's ghost. Heinlein and his wife, Carrie, Mrs. DuBois' closest friend, say they were not told of this spirit dread by the dapper diamond expert in so many words, but that he betrayed it by his actions and indirect allusions to the subject.

Mr. and Mrs. Heinlein were entertained by DuBois at his Great Herring Pond camp while his wife's body lay buried in the cellar, six days before the improvised tomb was surfaced with cement by DuBois, assisted by Larry Frazier, who, in a statement published in the Evening American yesterday said he didn't suspect for a minute that the remains of the missing woman were being sealed there.

"DuBois told my wife and I," said Heinlein at his home on Academy st., South Braintree, today, "that he was afraid to stay alone at his Plymouth camp, after his wife disappeared. At first we supposed it was due to a natural feeling of loneliness, but as developments quickly followed each other we suspected why.

FIRST SUSPICION

"'Dee Dee,' his wife, had invited us to spend the week-end with them on Aug. 13. I figured he murdered his wife on the night of Aug. 9, which fell on Tuesday. On Friday, Aug. 12, DuBois called at our Braintree home and told us 'Dee Dee' had gone on a motor trip with a Mr. Butler and his wife to Canada and suggested that my wife and I keep the week-end engagement the same as if she were there.

"My wife thought it strange 'Dee Dee' didn't send us some notice of her sudden change in plans and I thought it unusual for her, too, but said nothing to Charlie. We promised to go down the next day and did. We brought along some supplies.

"Saturday night, while seated in the living room, DuBois started discussing death and spiritualism. He said he had been a firm believer in spiritualism for years. It was that which brought up the subject of death, but I cannot recall now, details of his conversation.

"I simply recall that he seemed terribly timid that night. He seemed pale and agitated for him. He got the breakfast Sunday morning and my wife and I noticed that in his nervousness he had cracked every egg. He seemed worried about something.

TALKED OF WIFE

"Sunday morning he and I went to Buzzard's Bay for bait and, returning to the camp, went fishing in a boat on Great Herring Pond. If he mentioned his wife's motor trip into Canada once, he mentioned it 15 or 20 times that day and injected the fact that he was worried about her safety.

"My daughter and her husband came in the afternoon and so did Dr Curtis, Mrs. DuBois physician. DuBois chatted with Dr. Curtis from the boat 40 feet out, while Dr. Curtis stood on shore.

"We started to leave for home Sunday evening, but DuBois urged my wife and me to stay all night saying that he couldn't stay alone. He admitted he was afraid. I thought that strange for a man his size.

TELLS OF ACCIDENT

"We motored home to South Braintree Monday morning. Monday, August 15, about 9 p. m., while I was in my cellar, I heard DuBois' voice at the window.

"'Dee Dee' was killed, he said, and started crying. I opened the door and told him to come in. He told the story about his wife and the Butlers having met with an automobile accident near Montreal. He said the Butlers were killed instantly but that 'Dee Dee' badly crushed, had lived 18 hours.

"I asked him how he learned of it and he said through detectives. He told me that when he hadn't received any mail from 'Dee Dee' he had notified a detective agency to trace her.

"I asked him what he was going to do about the body and he said all three had been cremated and that he was going to throw 'Dee Dee's' ashes to the four winds. I told him I didn't think he could do that as it would be against the law and he dropped the subject. Later he said he planned to cast the ashes of his wife from the Statue of Liberty.

"I was not impressed with the story of the auto accident. He said the overturned car with the three victims pinned under it had been found by the occupants of another car who had stopped suddenly to avoid hitting a pet dog and, glancing down a ravine were horrified to see the wrecked car.

"On his visit the previous Friday he told my wife and I that the Butlers had driven into his camp on Tuesday, Aug. 9, and invited him and his wife to go with them, but that he couldn't see his way clear and that he gave his wife money to buy traveling effects in Boston.

"The Monday night DuBois called at our home to tell of his wife's death we invited him to stay all night.

"He told us Tuesday morning that he hadn't slept very well. He wore blue sun glasses which I thought queer when he got up that morning and I recalled I had seen them on him at the camp during our week-end. He had the blue glasses on when he went to Boston to make further investigations about his wife's affairs. He told us he was wearing the blue glasses to hide the weary expression in his eyes.

SUSPICIONS GROW

"Everything he did and said, his whole demeanor somehow from the first time I saw him on Aug. 13, seemed to increase my suspicions. I slowly but surely reached the conclusion that 'Dee Dee' hadn't been killed in an auto accident, but that he had disposed of her.

"Moved by my suspicions I went to Mrs. Grover, whose camp is near that of DuBois, and asked her if she had seen the Butlers drive in on Tuesday and take Mrs. DuBois away with them.

"'There must be some mistake,' said Mrs. Grover. 'The Butlers didn't call here Tuesday. Charlie Dubois told me 'Dee Dee" went to Boston to meet them.'

"I checked up with persons in Braintree and Quincy and decided to wait no longer. I thought it would be better if Dr. Curtis come with me to lay the case before the authorities, but he could not go and I went to Dedham alone. I talked with Mr. Arbuckle and later told my story to State Detective Fleming. I told Fleming I was sure Mrs. DuBois had been murdered. I asked him what he thought of it and he replied very deliberately, 'There is murder here.'

"I told Fleming that if DuBois was let free too long he would shoot himself.

"How did I feel about making such a serious charge against a friend of such long standing? Well, it wasn't the most pleasant task in the world, but with the circumstances which I had in my possession and the whole complexion of the case, I felt it was the plain duty of a citizen to act as I did.

"I turned it over in my mind for days. I didn't sleep three nights trying to decide what I ought to do. I don't know how many cigarettes I smoked in trying to reach a decision. That I was justified in my action has been only too graphically borne out by developments.

PRAISES MRS DUBOIS

"It was a horrible affair. It seems like a nightmare. Mrs. DuBois was one of the finest women I ever met. She catered to her husband and loved him. She was solicitous of his welfare and comfort. To even hint that she had affairs with other men is a base lie.

"His charge that she took dope was as false as his stories of her disappearance.

"She knew of the blonde in the case. She told us she could never endure another winter like that which she went through in New York last year. She said Charlie neglected her, stayed away from home a great deal, and refused even to be with her at Christmas, New Year's and Easter, when she had special repasts prepared for him. That woman suffered more than anybody knows, and she kept most of her troubles to herself.

PLANNED IN JULY

"I think their domestic relations helped me in my deductions.

"As Larry Frazier, the chauffeur described to the Boston American yesterday in my presence, he and DuBois had laid most of the cement floor in the cottage cellar in July. DuBois had left unfinished a section six feet long and three feet wide which he told Frazier he planned to use as a base for the washing machine by elevating it four inches higher than the rest of the floor.

"Naturally Frazier, whom I know intimately and have the greatest confidence in, did not have the slightest suspicion that 'Dee Dee's' body was concealed there.

"DuBois was crafty, but not as clever as he thought. He was very vain, but in his attempt to carry out the so-called 'Perfect Crime' he talked too much and didn't stick to one story.

"I always suspected that he was giving his wife slow poison which didn't work as he planned and I think 'Dee Dee' suspected it too when she suffered pain and Charlie went around broadcasting that she had cancer.

"I also claim that DuBois shot 'Dee Dee' while she was preparing for bed and not while she slept as has been stated by the police. If she had been asleep she would have had her pajamas on. My wife says she always was particular about wearing them. When fired on she was clad only in a chemise I think Charlie entered her room suddenly and fired.

"DuBois' written statement that his wife was a suicide was as absurd as his other stories about her fate. I think it was designed to sooth his heart-broken mother."

Mrs. Heinlein closed her husband's interview by saying:

"It was an outrage to bury them together in the same grave.

"Dee Dee would not have wanted it after what he did to her. To think that he had the nerve to invite my husband and I to spend the week-end at the camp while Dee Dee was lying dead beneath us. I shiver when I think of it. He kept telling us that he thought it strange that he did not hear from her while on the trip and that all he could think of was that she was sleeping. This was before he told us she was killed in an auto crash."

Gasoline Mileage Guessing Contest—$100.00 in Awards

You are cordially invited to attend a salon of the New Ford V-8. For the first time all fourteen of the new Ford body types will be on display here. You can inspect them conveniently, carefully and at your leisure.

One of the features of the show is that arrangements have been made for you to ride in and drive the cars if you wish. There is, of course, no obligation. We sincerely want everyone to ride in this great new car and realize, first-hand, the thrill of its amazing performance. Don't miss this splendid opportunity.

A cutaway chassis is also on display. You can examine every working part, see how it functions, learn the care with which it is made and realize the simplicity and sturdiness of Ford construction.

There are talking pictures and special exhibits which show many of the new features.

Attendants will be on hand to give you any information you might wish about the cars, or the details of their construction.

If you phone your Ford dealer he'll gladly pick you up at your home or office and take you to the salon.

FILING OF DUBOIS WILL LINKS BLONDE TO BATTLE

of DuBois, should be grilled again.

The real estate of the jeweler, who yesterday was laid at rest in the same grave with the wife he killed, is in an almost hopeless muddle.

NO "GRACE DuBOIS"

This property was in Edith DuBois' name. Her husband transferred it to "Grace DuBois." Whether Mrs. DuBois signed the transfer is problematical. The authorities think her purported signature is a forgery.

Moreover, there is no such person as Grace DuBois, although it is known that by this designation, DuBois meant Grace Atwood.

Next, DuBois transferred some of the same property to his lawyer, Jeremiah J. McAnarney. The questions is—even granting that the transfer to "Grace DuBois" was illegal—whether it was his to transfer.

From first to last he had failed to probate his wife's estate and thus obtain legal title to it. Mrs. Jules DuBois, his brother's wife, has a $3500 equity in one of the Braintree houses.

Dist. Atty. Wilbar, after having informed newspapermen that he would enter the case for the first time, as a result of a discussion as to whether Grace Atwood should be further questioned, announced today he would take no action.

SULLIVAN SATISFIED

His announcement followed a conference with his first assistant, John V. Sullivan, who has been handling the case from its inception.

While Wilbar, who has been ill, refused to see interviewers, Asst. Dist. Atty. Sullivan announced that the case was officially closed.

Sullivan said he was satisfied in his own mind that Miss Atwood had no knowledge of the slaying of Mrs. DuBois, but refused to make public the facts on which he based his conclusion.

Referring to the sweetheart of the former jewelry salesman as "That little girl," Sullivan declared he would not make public her whereabouts on the nights of August 8, 9 and 10.

"That is her business and mine," he said. "I don't want any investigation made because it would show too much of her activities."

GIRL IN SECLUSION

Asked to repeat the story told him by Miss Atwood, the assistant district attorney suggested that she be questioned by newspapermen although the girl is in seclusion.

"I am confident from my questioning of Miss Atwood," said Sullivan, "that she had no knowledge of the death of Mrs. DuBois. This despite the fact that DuBois said they had planned to be married. He said his wife was going to France and he was bound for Reno to get a divorce. From my investigation I see no reason for reopening the case.

"As soon as DuBois shot himself I was confident he had murdered his wife and ordered men with sledges, crowbars and shovels, down to the camp. I had no definite knowledge of where the body was located, but suspected the new concrete foundations."

AUTOPSY UNNECESSARY

This despite the fact that Larry Frazier, Braintree chauffeur for Charles DuBois, had told the authorities of how he was the innocent accomplice in the last-minute burial in the cellar under the house at Great Herring Pond.

"As sure as I am standing here," said Sullivan, "I had no knowledge of where the body of Mrs. DuBois was buried, and actually thought it was under the garage floor at Braintree."

Asked why no autopsy was performed, Sullivan said it was unnecessary because he was confident DuBois had slain his wife. He added that an inquest was to be held today.

The assistant district attorney denied that police working on the case had expressed to him desire to further question Miss Atwood in connection with the case.

"As far as I know," he said, "They were all satisfied that the case was washed up. That goes for my chief, Mr. Wilbar, also."

Sullivan made it plain that he had closed the case because he was confident that DuBois was the only person possessing criminal knowledge of the slaying of his wife. Wilbar sustained him in this decision.

"I am satisfied that no one but DuBois participated in this murder or had any knowledge of it, and the case is closed. Justice has been done," he said.

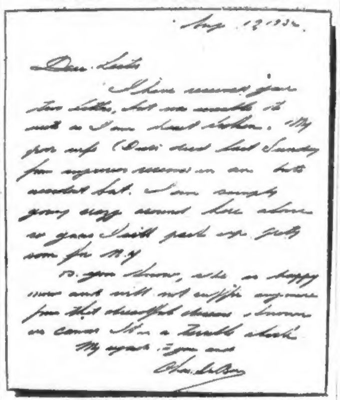
The district-attorney had previously informed a representative of the Evening American, after certain facts had been presented to him, that he would enter the case.

"I shall take whatever legal steps are necessary immediately," he said, after being informed that an autopsy had not been performed. He said he would confer with State Detective Albert Brouillard and Asst. Dist.-Atty. Sullivan.

Later when newspapermen arrived at Wilbar's home here they found Sullivan awaiting them with the smiling information that he would talk for the district attorney, who was too ill to be disturbed.

Sullivan said he had checked all of Miss Atwood's statements, and found them to be true. He added that she had given him valuable information regarding DuBois statement to her that his wife had been killed in an automobile accident in Montreal. He said he had talked with Grace Atwood for two hours in the presence of her father and counsel. He admitted Larry Frazier, the chauffeur, had been questioned a number of times.

MORE DUBOIS "ALIBI"



LETTER, POSTMARKED AUGUST 20

The text of this letter, sent to Lester Case, a New York city friend, by Charles DuBois follows: "Dear Lester—I have received your two letters, but was unable to write as I am heart broken. My poor wife Didi died last Sunday from injuries received in an auto accident Sat. I am simply going crazy around here alone so guess I will pack up pretty soon for N. Y. As you know, she is happy now and will not suffer anymore from that dreadful disease known as cancer. It is a terrible shock. My regards to you and—Charles DuBois."

DuBois Kin Asked That Flowers Be Omitted

The following statement was issued by Mrs. Marie DuBois, sister-in-law of the murdered Edith DuBois, from her Point Independence, Onset, home:

"I wish to say after hearing comments about my brother-in-law, Charles DuBois, and his wife being buried side by side that it is exactly as she would have had it—united in life, united in death.

"Under the circumstances, we asked that flowers be omitted. We wish to correct the statement that Mrs. Edith DuBois had no mourners, whatever. I, myself, was chief mourner. I cut some flowers especially for her and laid them on her grave.

"She was like a girl sister to me. For Charlie I always had the greatest affection and respect and still believe in him. We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for their kindness to us in our sorrow."

DuBois Phone Call to Mrs. Butler Revealed

It was revealed yesterday that Charles E. DuBois last Thursday held a telephone conversation with Mrs. Ruth Wickham Butler, the actress friend of his wife's who DuBois had reported as killed with his wife in an automobile accident.

Evidently inspired with fear by the exclusive story in the Boston Evening American in which Mrs. Butler exploded his story of her death, DuBois slipped from his Quincy hideaway and called Mrs. Butler, who was appearing in a vaudeville act in Lunenburg, N. S.

When DuBois committed suicide the next day a Boston Evening American clipping carrying the denial of Mrs. Butler was found in his pocket.

On the telephone he asked her if she was "going to appear against him," Mrs. Butler, now home in Foxboro, revealed.

'I most positively am, I answered," Mrs. Butler said. "As a matter of fact, had he lived, I intended suing him for slander and was going to demand a warrant."

Mrs. Butler termed DuBois a "typical ladies' man."

"Soon after I met him through mutual friends about five years ago in Boston," Mrs. Butler said, "I was forced to let him know that was not a prospect for his attentions. Even at that stage of our acquaintance I picked him out as a typical ladies' man."

"Edith told me once that she would never give him up to another woman. The last time I saw DuBois was about two years ago. I saw Mrs. DuBois last March in a department store."

Police Called to Eject Boy Friend

As a result of a complaint from a woman resident of Highland ave., near Wentworth st., Malden, whose name police decline to reveal, Patrolman Patsy Grassia was sent to her house last night to eject the daughter's boy friend.

Grassia ejected the boy friend but the daughter protested and left with him.

1500-Gallon Still Seized in New York

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Prohibition headquarters announced today that a distilling plant, capable of producing 1500 gallons a day, was confiscated last night in a barn at Swan Lake. Three men were arrested.

THREE DAY SHOW AT AIRPORT

A three-day air show, sponsored by the 26th Division Aviation, Massachusetts National Guard, and attended by state and city officials and prominent fliers, will mark the dedication of the new squadron hangar at Boston Airport over the coming week-end.

Gov. Ely will officially dedicate the $250,000 building on Friday when he delivers the dedicatory address.

The program, announced today by Brig.-Gen. John H. Agnew state adjutant-general, includes every phase of National Guard air training, stunts, formation flying, bomb dropping and many other features.

On Friday night a three hour band concert will be interspersed with a night flying exhibition, pyrotechnic display, and an emergency landing during which a parachute flare will be released.

Since the completion of the building, Col. Louis E. Boutwell, state air officer, Maj. Clarence E. Hodge, commanding officer of the squadron and Capt. Albert Edson, operations officer, have been working on the program for the three days.

William P. Long, chairman of the Park Commissioners of the city of Boston, representing Mayor Curley, will deliver an address

Ancient Terrapin, White House Pet, Vanishes

Washington, Sept. 20 (US)—The White House's oldest pet has mysteriously disappeared and an extensive search has revealed no inkling as to its fate.

He is the ancient and venerable terrapin, which was a pet of the late President Roosevelt's children. The late President Wilson used to watch him take his leisurely way across the White House lawn. And President Hoover's grandchildren have frequently played with the old fellow.

White House gardeners today expressed fear that he may have been the victim of some souvenir hunter.

NEW WAGE PACT TO DOCK HANDS

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Representatives of pier workers from Maine to Virginia met today with the conference committee of the steamship owners to receive notice of a new wage offer.

The pier workers representatives were accompanied by Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association.

The latest proposal by the operators accedes to the 75 cents an hour demand of the union, but insists on the operators' original offer of $1 an hour for overtime. Ryan and his associates have held out for $1.15 an hour for overtime.

Big Xmas Sock Shindy. ↑ Hole in One—Almost.
Lou and Andy Collide. A Smack for a Smack.
Paste Date in Bonnet. ↓ Howling Chipmunks!!

Ugh—Paolino Right Up and Kissed Us!

TIME, OCTOBER 7, two weeks from next Friday. Place, Boston Garden. Paste it in your bonnet—the time and place for the XMAS BASKET FUND show of the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN. You all know what the Xmas Basket Fund shows provide—action galore. Thrills from gong to gong. You never yet have seen an Xmas Basket show that wasn't a pippin. And maybe Lou Brouillard, world's greatest welterweight, and Andy Callahan, New England lightweight champion, will not uncork the fireworks. Neither backs up. Each unlimbers all batteries at opening gong and never ceases firing till the final clang of the bell. Brouillard vs. the one man his handlers were most careful to steer him clear of. Three times they were matched. Three times the match fell through. This time there will be no slip up. A give and take slugging southpaw like Callahan is the toughest man in the world to beat. Ask Sammy Fuller, who lost fight and title to Callahan. Brouillard knows Callahan is no unseasoned youngster like Zachow. Callahan is back, bigger and better than ever. Andy just beat Young Gublinsky, the boy Chicago was raving over, and knocked out Young Lefty in jig time. The Brouillard match is of Callahan's own making. Andy has been telling the world he can lick Brouillard for a long time. Folks, when the gong clangs two weeks from next Friday, you'll see a scrap that will warm the cockles of your heart!

THE THRILL OF A HOLE in one! We had it once—almost. We had the thrill, but not the hole. Oh the ecstasy of it! You fellows and gals in the Boston American's Hole in One Tournament, which starts one week from today, can't imagine the twang your heart strings will get if you're lucky enough to drop the little ball in—or near—the cup. Besides the thrill you'll get a handsome trophy to keep alive memories of it. To this day, every time we think of the hole in one we almost made down on the Wolf Hollow links in the Delaware Water Gap we get the old thrill. Also the surprise and discomfiture that accompanied it and we catch ourself rubbing our cheeks and muttering, "You do that again, Paolino and I'll knock your block off!"

IT HAPPENED this way. They call the 12th, or 13th hole—we can't quite recollect which—at Wolf Hollow, "Hagen's Folly." This is because the great Hagen went haywire once and took a 6 on the par 3 hole. It is atop a cone shaped hill like the crater of a small volcano. The tee is less than 100 yards away atop of another little hill. A good mashie shot puts the ball on the green. Go over or under on three sides and you'll roll far down the steep slopes into the rough. And oh, what a time you have getting out! The other side is heavy undergrowth just as tough getting out of. Paolino, the Basque Woodchopper, Archie Slatoff, the hotel owner, and your friend scribe were playing Wolf Hollow one September morning after two days of heavy rain. Paolino drove off into the rough on Hagen's Folly amid a string of naughty Basque words. The writer followed. We had been having trouble getting under the ball all morning. This time we got too far under, we thought. Up, up, up it sailed as we watched it and then down, down, down, pulled a little by the strong wind. And—ye gods and little fishes—it was going to alight near the center of the green. We watched with bated breath as the wind pulled it towards the cup. Kerplunk! It was in ! ! !

"WHOOPEE!" we yelled ecstatically, hurling our club hysterically towards the green. "Whoopee!" chimed in Archie.

"Yar-ro-o-o!" bellowed Paolino, and in a fit of Gallic Basque exuberance the big hairy heavyweight leaped upon us, seized us in a bear-like embrace and, before we knew what was happening, planted two mushy Gallic kisses on each cheek!

If we hadn't tossed away our mashie in our exuberance we would have socked Paolino right on the bean! We Yankees can't see the fun of kissing anything that doesn't wear skirts. We wanted to hand Paolino a smack for a smack.

Disappointment followed discomfiture. Hurrying down the hill from the tee and up the hill on to the green we found the ball, not in the cup, but imbedded in the soggy turf. Imbedded in the green—three inches away from the cup.

If we felt like socking Paolino when he planted that Gallic smack on our blushing countenance we felt like walloping him twice when we found that ball—so near and yet so far from that coveted hole in one!

PHILIP VAN HORNE of the Ryerson Company, driving along a Maine road the other day, struck a pheasant a glancing blow with the fender. It lifted the bird in the air, apparently over the auto top. Ryerson thought he knocked it into the bushes. Stopping about 10 miles up the road Phil got out of the car. There, strutting up and down the back seat, was Mister Pheasant, making himself right at home. Now, you tell one.

NO, LET JOHN MOYNIHAN tell it. "A long time ago when I was mining out in Colorado," says John, "I placed a pan of flapjack batter, mixed with rum, on the porch of the shack. A chipmunk fell into it. His squeaks caused every chipmunk in the county to come to his rescue. They licked the rum-soaked batter off him. Believe it or not, that rum-soaked batter got those chipmunks so inebriated they all imagined they were wildcats and we had to run for our lives!"

CASEY TESTS CRIMSON'S A, B TEAMS

Harvard's first varsity scrimmage is scheduled for this afternoon. Promptly at 3:30, Eddie Casey will send his A and B elevens on the field against Jimmy Knox's Second Varsity crew, for its initial full length scrimmage of the year.

Today's workout should show just how powerful the Crimson eleven really is. It has everything to lose and nothing more than a good workout to gain from the scrimmage. If the regulars run wild against the Jayvees, it will be nothing more than expected.

But if the first and second clubs find it difficult to gain through the Knoxmen as the third and fourth teams did yesterday, then Casey and his staff of coaches will have to begin probing and planning all over again. Yesterday afternoon in a purely offensive drill for the varsity, teams C and D were unable to score more than three times in the 45 minutes of play.

VETERANS POWERFUL

However, there is a marked difference between the first two teams and the rest of the Crimson squad. Casey's veteran line, even minus the services of Eddy Rogers and Warren Casey, substitute center, should rip the opposition to pieces. And if the Crimson backs get moving at the rate they were traveling a year ago this time, it will be impossible to count up the score when the whistle blows.

Casey's intention is not to see how good the offense is, but how well the players can carry out their assignments. The entire coaching squad from Casey down will have its eyes open for missed assignments, and the offenders will spend a miserable half hour after practice if detected.

Dick Leonard, second string quarterback and Donald Gleason, halfback, succumbed to injuries yesterday which put them on the retired list. A bruising bit of work on the tackling and blocking dummies took its toll.

LEONARD OUT FOR WEEK

Leonard will be absent from practice for a week, but Gleason should be back in form by Thursday or Friday at the latest. The appearance on the field of Eddy Rogers, varsity guard injured last week, lifted a bit the cloud of gloom which had descended over the practice session. Rogers showed up clad in a white shirt in place of his regular Crimson jersey and went through the workout with the rest of the players, but took no part in the contact work.

Casey is encouraged by the promise of Deeb Peter, lightweight halfback, as a scoring threat. Peter is being prepared to fill in at left halfback along with Bob Hurlbut and Tommy Locke. Peter played a good game for the C club yesterday and may be given a chance with one of the first two clubs this afternoon.

The line standout today is Frank Crane, former Everett star, who was converted to fill a guard position this fall. The varsity will lineup today with Captain Carl Hageman, right end; Malcolm Bancroft, right tackle; Herman Gunlach, right guard; Roger Hallowell, center; James Esterly, left guard; Irad Hardy, left tackle, and Thomas Nazro, left end.

In the first backfield will be Harry Wells, quarterback; Jack Crickard, left halfback; Charlie Nevin, fullback, and Johnny Dean, right halfback. The second backfield will have Whitney at quarter, Hurlbut and Pescosolido, halfbacks, and Waters, fullback. Leon Francisco, tackle and Jade Healey, a guard who participated in yesterday's drill will be in the Team B. lineup also.

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

THEY'LL BEAR SERIES PRESSURE

Marcus Aurelius Koenig, former Yank infielder but now the sparkplug of the Cubs, is one of the big unanswered questions of the coming classic. Will he star in the series as he has during the Cubs' big drive?

Cubs Infield Has Margin on Yanks

By JOE CASHMAN

Right off the bat in this study of the merits of the contenders in the coming World Series, the Chicago Cubs instill a grain of indecision in the mind of your correspondent who has, or certainly had a very firm idea that the New York Yankees are the stronger and should win the classic without much trouble.

This is the first of a series comparing the New York Yankees and Chicago Cubs, written by Joe Cashman, baseball editor of the Boston Evening American. Tomorrow the outfield will be considered.

For, taken as a whole, the Cubs have the better infield both defensively and offensively. At least, that's what the figures show. And far more ball games are won in the infield than anywhere else, with the possible exception of the pitching box.

At first base will be found Manager Charlie Grimm for the Cubs and Lou Gehrig for the Yanks.

GEHRIG HAS EDGE

The edge must be given to the Yanks here. Gehrig, a fair-to-middling fielder, but a murderous .350 slugger, stands out over Grimm, the defensive master who is hitting over his head at his present .308 clip.

There the American League superiority ends, our research reveals. Billy Herman, star rookie second-sacker of the Cubs, has been hitting over .300 all season, while Tony Lazzeri, veteran guardian of the Yanks' keystone sack, has been slightly under that mark most of the way. There is little to choose between them afield. Push 'Em Up Tony is by far the more experienced of the two, but his younger rival's superior strength and speed offset that advantage.

And now we come to the young man who makes the Windy City infield look so hot.

KOENIG "MADE" CLUB

He is Marcus Aurelius Koenig, who was a series star with the Yanks in 1926, 1927 and 1928, and is now shortstopping for the Cubs.

If the Chicago management had not made the master stroke of resurrecting Mark from the Coast League in the middle of the summer, it is questionable whether the Cubs would have a safe lead in the National League today and it's certain that their infield would not look nearly as good in comparison with the Yanks' inner quartet.

Koenig took the place of Billy Jurges, the young Brooklyn bank clerk, who was shot by a beautiful divorcee. Jurges had been fielding very well but his hitting work was around .240. The ex-Yankee stepped right in and walloped the agate at close to a .400 clip and as he spurted along, his mates spurted with him until they were well out in front. He made the club.

LARY READY TO SUB

Koenig's opponent at the start of the series will be Frank Crosetti. If this 20-year-old Italian first-year product of the Coast League shows any signs of jitters, he'll be replaced by Lyn Lary.

Regardless of who the Yanks use the edge must go to the Cubs. Neither Crosetti nor Lary are hitting better than .250 while Koenig, though he may not be quite as steady afield as either of the Yankee pair, can take very good care of themselves out there and is hitting .351, the highest mark boasted by any player on either team.

At third base, the Yanks come

And here's another question. Will Frankie Crosetti, Yanks' young shortstop (above), come through? Joe McCarthy would like to know so if the stars are giving you any inside information get in touch with Joe at once. If the excitement of a big series proves too much for Crosetti McCarthy can fall back on Lary but because the Yanks need defensive rather than offensive strength they are pulling for Crosetti.

First Racket of Series Uncovered

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—William Cunningham, who describes himself as a former railroad fireman from Kansas City, completed the first day of his wait for the first world series ticket this afternoon. The series opens a week from tomorrow and Cunningham is still the whole line of aspirants for early entrance.

He said his capital consisted of $1.20, but he hopes to raise food money by charging for answers to questions as to why he started waiting so soon. The only answer he has been able to think up so far is that he was nosed out of first place last year.

CUBS CLASH IN TWIN BILL TODAY

Special to the Boston Evening American.

Chicago, Sept. 20—The series which will either settle the National League pennant fight or convert it into the most thrilling and tense struggle in the circuit's history is on in this baseball mad metropolis this afternoon with the pace-setting Cubs and the second-place Pittsburgh Pirates opening a four-game engagement in a doubleheader.

One victory in the four games will give the Cubs the gonfalon. Four straight defeats will reduce their lead to two games and leave the final result very much in doubt.

The Cubs, heavyweight favorites, enter the series with 88 victories to their credit and six games left to play. The Pirates have won 81 and have eight games remaining.

One more victory will give the leaders a total of 89 and providing they gain it at the Pirates' expense, the runners-up couldn't win more than 88 games regardless of what happened thereafter.

CUBS CONFIDENT

The Pirates, pretty much on the spot, as it were, refuse to comment on their chances. The Cubs, on the other hand, loudly predict they will take the last mathematical possibility away from their only rivals this very p. m.

"Guy Bush, who will probably start the world's series, and Pat Malone will pitch the opening doubleheader and one, if not both, of them will win and end the race," declared Manager Charlie Grimm today.

"Then, I'll give several of my players a much-needed rest," the pilot continued, "so as we'll be in tip-top shape when we face the Yanks. I'll be one of the vacationists. Others will include Kiki Cuyler, Riggs Stephenson, Woody English and my regular pitchers.

HARTNETT, KOENIG, REST UP

Hartnett and Koenig are already taking things easy, both being bothered by minor injuries. My trainer informs me that either could play today, but neither will."

Manager Gibson of the Pirates, while silent regarding his team's chances, was not reluctant about naming his pitchers.

"Steve Swetonic and Glen Spencer, both of whom have caused the Cubs considerable trouble al' season, will toe the mound, and I don't expect to have to replace either," stated the veteran pilot of the Corsairs.

A crowd of 35,000 is expected and nobody would be surprised of the 45,000 capacity of Wrigley Field were taxed for today's twin-bill, providing the weather man behaves.

The elements are the only fly in the ointment. Predictions are probable showers and thunderstorms, which, if true, will mean twin-bills tomorrow and Thursday.

Burleigh Grimes is definitely out of World's Series calculations as a starting pitcher. The star of the 1931 series has shown no flashes of his old time form.

JUST ANOTHER CLUB, SAYS RUTH

New York, Sept. 20—(INS)—"Just another ball club."

Babe Ruth speaking and he was speaking about the Chicago Cubs.

"The Cubs will be just another team to us and if we grab the first two games in New York, the thing may wind up before we leave Chicago," said Ruth today, as he prepared for the world's series.

18 LETTER MEN ON TIGER SQUAD

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 20 (INS)—Princeton's 68 candidates for its 1932 grid team today included 18 lettermen and 17 members of last year's freshman squad.

Graduation hurt the Tiger prospects considerably in the loss of Captain Yeckley, Gahagan, Lea, Wister, and Kellogg, all linemen, and Armour and Ryckman in the backfield. Jack James' resignation from college and a knee injury to Ray Knell, cut into backfield possibilities.

Outstanding veterans are led by Capt. Josh Billings, guard on last year's team. Others are Ken Fairman, end, Tom Johnson, an end who is being converted into a back, and Karl Larsen, another end. Tackles with experience on the varsity are Pete Fortune, a senior who suffered from injuries two years ago; John Rutherford, another senior who was ineligible last year and two juniors, Lane and Gill.

Besides Billings in the center of the line are Fisher and Garrett, guards and Hinman, center. The supply of experienced backs is limited, with Draudt, Bales and Craig, all juniors, and Purnell, a senior, as the only regulars returning.

High School Grid Review

Tomorrow, Joe Mooney, the American's schoolboy sports reporter and Tap, staff artist, will be at Washington st. playground, Roslindale, to survey Coach Jimmy Duffy's Jamaica Plain High football squad.

Each day the American plans to give the schoolboy sports followers a complete review of a local high school football situation. This week, the schools selected are Jamaica Plain High, English High, Commerce, and Hyde Park High.

Watch for your school in the Boston Evening American.

Vines Encounters Little Opposition

Los Angeles, Sept. 20 (AP)—Ellsworth Vines, defending champion, took two easy steps forward, advancing without a struggle through the first rounds of the singles and mixed doubles.

Today he continues his singles campaign against Dick Belote, Occidental College player, who hardly is expected to put the world's champion to a test.

SOX TILT WITH SENATORS

By RILEY GRANNON

The Red Sox come home today to write "finis" on the local baseball season, in engagements with the Senators and Yanks.

They open against the Solons, who will be here for a single game today, a doubleheader tomorrow, and a single game Thursday. Then will come the champion New Yorkers, probably with Babe Ruth, for three games in as many afternoons.

Manager Marty McManus and his boys have just completed another unsuccessful tour through the West, where they ran into most of their woe this year.

They managed to take two out of three from the White Sox, but the best they could do against the Browns, Indians and Tigers was one win out of three.

SOX SUNK IN CELLAR

Yesterday, he used Smead Jolley as a catcher. The big fellow was removed from left field several days ago in favor of Johnny Watwood.

Andy Spognardi, B. C. product, has been playing second base and doing right well. There was never any question about his fielding, but many doubted whether he would hit well enough. He has been hitting over .300.

BRAVES CLIMB IS HALTED

New York, Sept. 19—Walter "Huck" Betts is the nominee of Manager Bill McKechnie to keep the Boston Braves in a running for a pay-off berth in the National League race by whipping the Giants in the second of their three-game series here this afternoon.

The Giants, being in danger of gaining sole occupancy of seventh place, which they now share with the Cards, will shoot Carl "Lefty" Hubbell, their best bet, to the hill to avoid defeat.

While all that was taking place, the fourth-place Phils were again beating the third-place Dodgers, leaving the winning but not gaining fifth-place Braves 1½ games back of the lowest money rung and two games in the rear of third.

DODGERS FINAL FOE

The Warriors are now confident that they can finish at least on even terms with the Dodgers, whom they have beaten 14 out of 20 times and against whom they will close on Saturday and Sunday.

Mat Results

At Camden, N. J.—Fred Grumbeier, Iowa, d. Joe Montana, N. J.
At Montreal—Henri DeGlane, France, d. Joe Malcewicz, N. Y.
At Pittsfield—Count Zarynoff, Grafton, d. Karol Zbrszko, N. Y.

Alexander of Sox Leading With Club

Dale Alexander is back at the top of the American League batting race. He gathered two hits in four times up against the Tigers yesterday, while Jimmy Foxx was limited to one safety in five attempts by the White Sox, making the latest figures read:

Alexander	.361

"Lefty" Grove, who is pitching every two or three days in these closing moments of the campaign, apparently to earn a bonus, turned in his 25th victory against the White Sox yesterday. The Mackian ace now leads the pitchers of both leagues in wins and only Vernon Gomez of the Yanks has a chance to catch him.

Chuck Klein went two up in the National League home run race by rapping out his 38th four-bagger of the season to help the Phils beat the Dodgers. The Quaker slugger now has only one less circuit drive to his credit than Ruth, who is out of the game, and has two less games to play to stay ahead of Mel Ott, of the Giants, his closest rival in the senior circuit.

THREE GREEN BACKS HURT

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 20—A scrimmage session relegated three-fourths of the Dartmouth backfield to the sidelines with minor injuries.

Bill Clark and Roald Morton both were unable to take part in the afternoon and Dave Hedges saw only part-time service. Jack Hill, Harry Deckert and John Donovan moved up to the varsity, with Sammy Fishman calling signals. Dick Carpenter was given a varsity end position.

Cycle Races on Rockingham Card

Motorcycle racing will make its debut at the Salem, N. H., Rockingham Speedway Sunday afternoon when professional and amateur riders participate in a lengthy program. The feature is a 100-mile race for professionals. The meeting is run under the sanction of the American Motorcycle Association.

BROUILLARD TO FIGHT CALLAHAN AT GARDEN

SPORTS

'Fight of the Year' But of What Year? Mr. Albertani's Cow.

Maxie Is a Pacer, but His Invention Helps. Doctor Casey's Job.

A MEMO TO MISTER MICKEY WALKER

Speculator, N. Y., Sept. 20.

Mickey Walker,
Madame Bey's Training Camp,
Summit, N. J.

Dear Mick: Since you are the one most vitally concerned with what's going on up here in this neck of the woods, it might be a good idea to give you the lowdown. Good idea or not, I have to fill this column, pardner, and while I have to write it all you have to do is read it, so here it is:

Your prospective opponent in the Battle of the When Is It took the second postponement in good grace. Schmeling is a first rate sportsman, Mike, which will make two good sportsmen in the ring when you crawl in there together.

You know they have been advertising this bout as "the fight of the year," and I'm beginning to think it was a good break they didn't say what year. One more postponement and Bill Farnsworth and Damon Runyon can make it a combined Milk Fund and Christmas Fund show. And if it is set back one more time I am going to organize an expedition to get you and Doctor Kearns out of Madame Bey's in time for a New Year's party.

Signor Albertani's Cow:

As you may know, Francis Albertani, an old cow hand from Mulberry St., is doing the publicity for the Rodeo this year. He came up here Saturday night to have a look at Schmeling but after the workout yesterday afternoon he disappeared. He had been gone a couple of hours when Pants Lawrence, one of the famous characters of these parts, heard him yelling for help from a back pasture.

It turned out that he had been crossing this pasture on the way to the golf course when he had sighted one of Bill Osborne's milk cows. The cow had switched her tail and started galloping around the pasture and Francis had promptly climbed the nearest tree.

He probably would have been up there yet if Pants hadn't discovered him. However, it was good training for his job with the Rodeo because after he got him down out of the tree, Pants explained to him that this was the kind of cow that gave milk. Which was news to Francis, who had always believed that milk came out of bottles.

During his stay in the tree Francis grew very fond of this cow and after he got back to the hotel, he offered to buy her from Osborne for the Rodeo.

Speculator has got so tony the last few years, calling itself "the St. Moritz of America" and all that, that Pants Lawrence is going to petition the courts to be allowed to change his first name to Trousers.

The Pacer:

One of the reasons I am writing you this note, Mike, is that I know how fed up you must be with training camp life by this time. You were beginning to have enough when I was out there, and this last week probably is going to be the hardest.

Even if you get rocked to sleep, you will have the consolation of knowing that Kearns won't be waking you up to go on the road.

So even that cloud will have a silver lining, although all of us are hoping that you won't be knocked out. You have a marvelous record on that standpoint—one actual and one technical K. O. in 15 years of fighting—and it will be great if you can maintain it through the rest of your ring career.

But if the two postponements have annoyed you, be consoled by the fact that they haven't made Maxie's life any more pleasant. I caught him twice yesterday pacing up and down, up and down, by the hour along a little 52-foot walk in front of his cottage.

Invention Really Promising:

Jacobs and McCarney insisted it was his regular way of doing road work, but it looked to me more like the behavior of a caged animal. I mean I had the feeling that this training camp life might be getting on his nerves, too.

Except for a short workout yesterday, when Max wasn't pacing that bit of pavement, he was tinkering with his invention—a new and better lay pigeon that is apt to make him a lot of money. He has it heavily patented in all the countries where trapshooting is a sport, and he knows to the last hundred how many millions of clay pigeons are broken each year in each of these countries. In addition to being more durable, Schmeling's pigeon has a disc with a brightly colored paper streamer attached so that there never is any doubt about whether it has been hit. He argues, too, that these streamers come nearer to giving the impression of a live bird falling.

Why don't you work out a million-dollar invention during your spare time at Madame Bey's? Then you can take that trip to Europe I heard you discussing with Kearns.

Another Casey at the Bat:

Eddie Casey, better known as Doc, the bald-headed gentleman who has been crawling into the ring with Schmeling ever since the German started campaigning on our shores, blew into camp yesterday from Detroit. Casey, a salesman for the Standard Products Company, is pretty much out of the boxing business, an occasional job of refereeing in Michigan and seconding Herr Max being his only contributions to the profound profession these days.

But Schmeling will have no one else, and it's the softest job in the world, so Casey always shows up when the German is going to the wars. I say it is the softest job in the world because Casey's sole duty in the corner is to take care of cuts and wounds, and in all his fights over here Max has had just one minor cut. So minor, in fact, that the Doctor couldn't recall in which fight it had been sustained.

It is only natural, Mickey, for Casey to think of the black-browed German boy, and he was telling me only a few minutes ago that Max Baer is the only boxer in the business who might possibly trouble his man. Of course, he may be wrong. You may trouble him no little next Monday. I'm just telling you what Casey at the Bat said.

"He hits harder with his right hand than Jack Delaney ever did," he says, "and there was a time when that Delaney had a right hand that was a lulu. Remember that one with Berlenbach?"

I did, quite well. But that was a long time ago, and this is today.

Don't get any more boils, kid, or we'll have to transfer the battle to Boyle's Thirty Acres, and the best of luck to you. —BILL.

M'COY IN MAT GO AT REVERE

Bob McCoy, former Holy Cross star, will try to gain new mat honors when he collides with Al Peckham of Dorchester in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the Rollaway Rink, Revere, tonight. Peckham is in good condition, and asserts he will upset McCoy's plans.

The semifinal will find Karol Zbyszko of Poland in action against Regis Siki of Abyssinia.

In the preliminaries, Wong Bock Cheung of China will take on Frank Lurick of Russia, while Scotty Dawkins of Louisiana will oppose John Spellman of Brown.

Two Card Regulars Left

St. Louis (AP)—In a game late this season the crippled St. Louis Cardinals took the field with only two of their 1931 regulars—Jim Bottomley and Pepper Martin—in the lineup. Martin was playing third base instead of center field.

BASKET FUND TITLE CLASH ON OCT. 7

By JACK CONWAY

Lou Brouillard will defend his title as New England welterweight champion against the furious two-fisted attack of Andy Callahan in a 10-round bout at the Boston Garden on October 7.

The clash between these rugged battlers will be staged to benefit the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American.

Contracts for the championship skirmish were signed at the office of Matchmaker Billy Ames following a week spent in negotiations. Under the conditions of the match Brouillard's New England welterweight championship will be at stake. Lou has agreed to weigh in at 147 pounds at 3 o'clock. This is the official notch for the welterweight division.

CALLAHAN A WELTER NOW

Callahan weighed 141½ pounds when he knocked out Young Lefty in a round at Fall River on last Wednesday night. Andy will likely scale between 141 and 142 pounds when he makes his bid for the New England welterweight title.

Morris Lemoine represented Brouillard during the final negotiations, while Johnny Buckley acted for Callahan. Lou and Andy sat in with their managers when the contracts were signed.

BOTH FIGHTERS FIT

Brouillard and Callahan looked physically fit. Following the signing, the rivals shook hands and announced they would go into training at once. Brouillard plans to condition himself at Joe Beston's gym at Quincy, while Callahan will work at Jerry Buckley's gym on Cambridge st.

The bout will bring together New England's greatest thumpers under the heavyweight division. In addition to being able to score knockout punches, Brouillard and Callahan are aggressive. They rip and tear from bell to bell. Neither will be satisfied unless he scores a knockout.

BOUT AT POPULAR PRICES

The Christmas Basket Fund committee and the Boston Garden has decided to offer this battle of champions at popular prices. So as to keep step with the times. These are days of bargain prices.

A year ago the Christmas Fund committee and the Boston Garden whacked the high price ticket scale on the head with the Schaaf-Dorval bout which drew $23,000. Other promoters were forced to follow this lead.

Once more the Christmas Fund and the Boston Garden come to bat with a star attraction at bargain prices.

"GOOD LUCK, PAL!"

Wonder if they mean it? Because on the night of Oct. 7, at the Garden, they will be stripped down to fighting trunks and tossing murderous leather. Yet they look friendly enough here, don't they? That's Andy Callahan (left), and Lou Brouillard shaking after signing to fight for the American's Christmas Basket Fund.

DEMPSEY WON'T REFEREE MAX AND MICK

New York, Sept. 20—A dream that would have had fight fans blasting down the gates of Madison Square Garden bowl next Monday night flickered and died out today.

Jack Dempsey, here to see the 15-round match between Max Schmeling and Mickey Walker, does not wish to be considered as the referee. He said so with decision and finality.

"I would not want to have anything to do with deciding that match. I might be biased.

"Maybe Kearns and Walker would be better off with me in the ring, as I probably would be leaning backward trying to give them an even break. But it wouldn't be fair to me and it wouldn't be fair to Schmeling."

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

"GENTLEMAN" JACK WASHBURN and Gus Sonnenberg have signed the official contracts for their finish mat bout at the Boston Garden on September 30.

When the big fellows did their John Hancock act, they confirmed a tip handed out in this column a month ago that the old Dynamiter and "Gentleman" Jack were going to blast the wrestling lid off at the Garden.

Mr. Boston

I can imagine Sonny's feelings when he walks into the lobby of the Garden and sees the oil painting of Jim Londos staring him in the face. He is likely to call for a step ladder and pull the painting down. And give it to Joe Gilman, the Indians or whoever is interested in oil paintings of wrestlers.

It was in the Garden that Gus won the world's heavyweight wrestling title from Strangler Lewis before a crowd of 18,000 persons who kicked in with $78,000 at the box office.

When the Ray Fabiani forces secured control of the Garden, the bars were put up on Gus. The boys didn't want Londos wrecked by the old Dynamiter. Gus went along with Paul Bowser at the Arena and in Braves Field. He continued to bust box office records, setting a new high for the ball parks when he drew $56,000 with Henri DeGlane at Braves Field.

The signing of Washburn and Sonny brings together the king pins of the tough birds in the rival wrestling wheels. It should be more of a fight than a wrestling bout.

Incidentally Gus has notified the American Wrestling Association that he didn't receive any broken bones when he crashed out of the ring in his Philadelphia bout with Dick Shikat. It appears Sonny landed on his head on a concrete floor. You cannot hurt a wrestler by hitting him on the head.

Lutze against Kiralenko

NICK LUTZE, who oozes color has been signed to mingle with Matros Kiralenko in the semifinal Charley Strack will oppose Benny Ginsberg of New York in another bout.

Halaiko bows in

STEVE HALAIKO of Buffalo, who quarrels with Tommy Rawson, Jr., of East Boston in a 10-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at the Arena on Thursday night, once won a duke over Sammy Mandell, former lightweight champion of the world.

In his last Boston start, Halaiko lost a decision to Sammy Fuller, but was in there tossing punches with reckless abandon at the final gong.

RAWSON IS one of the most promising of the local boxers. He hopes to emulate the ring deeds of Lou Brouillard, Ad Zachow, Andy Callahan, Johnny Indrisano and other local boxers who have hit the big money. If he wins over Halaiko he will be able to hobnob around with the headliners and cash in at the box office.

Eddie Mack says there'll be lots of excitement when Dutch Leonard of Waltham collides with Eino Nyholm of Maynard in the semifinal of six rounds. Another six-session affair will bring together Buster Thiel of Norwood and Johnny Dixon of Norwood.

St. Joe's on job

"FATHER" BILLY Cuddy's St. Joe's T. A. Society will blaze a new amateur boxing trail when it stages its first show of the indoor season at Mechanics Building on Saturday night. There will be bouts at 118, 124, 135, 147 and 175 pounds. The class of the amateur boxers have entered, according to "Father" Bill. You will witness plenty of fireworks.

BOB CURRAN FLASHES IN B. C. DRILL

Coach Joe McKenney whipped his capable Eagle eleven through its first scrimmage on Alumni Field before hundreds of students who had their first glance at the team they cheer this fall in the new stadium.

Bob Curran, Tom Blake, Johnny Freitas, and Pete Chesnulevich featured the backfields on teams A and B. Blake's work marked him as a strong candidate for a position on the regular eleven as did the performance of Bobby Curran, the fleetest member of the Maroon and Gold squad.

Henry Plausse is battling for a tackle position on team A which will undoubtedly start a week from Saturday. Plausse led many of the bucks and tackle plays through the path he cleared with his plunging 180 pounds.

Mike Romano, center on team A is rapidly improving.

Now that the entire squad has been completed it is found that there are four sets of brothers on the roster. Capt. Phil Couhig, tackle and his brother Dave, a backfield man; Bob Curran, the halfback and Joe, another back; Roger and John Kirvan, both backs; and Paul Donahue, hefty end and Charlie Donahue, a member of the backfield, all are varsity footballers.

CUBS IN FIELD HAVE EDGE ON YANKEES

close to equalling the Cubs strength because of a smart move similar to the one the National Leaguers made when they picked up Koenig.

When Joie Sewell completed a dozen years of honorable service at Cleveland, he was adjudged all through and made a free agent. The Yanks took him on and the acquisition proved a life-saver for them.

Both Crosetti and Lary failed in covering the hot corner and the former Indian, tried as a last hope, responded by playing some of the finest ball of his career.

Capt. Woody English of the Cubs, young, fast, smart and game, is one of the greatest third-sackers in the business, yet his advantage over Sewell isn't very large. He covers more ground but is no steadier in the field. He hits slightly harder but not as long. Neither is he as hard to pitch to as Sewell, long noted as having the most remarkable batting eye in the game.

The substitute strength of the rivals, represented by Jurges and Hack of the Cubs, and Farrell and either Lary or Crosetti of the Yanks, leaves neither with an edge.

CUBS HAVE MARGIN

The sum and substance of this discussion is that the Cubs are stronger defensively at first and third and hold their own at second, and the Grimm quartet hits for .310 as against the .294 mark of the Yankee group.

We repeat again, though, that this is what the figures show. It is said that figures never lie. But sometimes they are the most brazen of fabricators. And this may be and, we think, is one of those times.

The faculty to break up the ball game every time they step to the plate, which is possessed by Gehrig and Lazzeri and by none of the Cubs, and the fighting and inspirational qualities of "Push 'Em Up Tony, which can be matched by no other player on either team, not excepting even Ruth, put the Yankee infield on a par with the Windy City quartet, to our way of thinking.

And if we had to express a preference, we would give the New Yorkers a very slight shade.

Meet the Perfect Amateur

A Six Months Golfer—Forgets Game in Winter—Plays for Fun—Won't Write or Endorse

You'll never step out on the green with a "C. Ross Somerville goose-neck putter" to flub a simple three-footer. You'll never pick up a magazine and read a ghosted tale of "How I Rose From Chump to Champion—By C. Ross Somerville."

C. ROSS SOMERVILLE

In fact you'll probably see little about C. Ross Somerville except in the sports pages which will tell you how he won this tournament or that tournament and added to his list of titles.

The reason is simply that C. Ross "Sandy" Somerville, who smashed through to the national crown at Five Farms, is the "perfect amateur."

PROMOTERS AFTER SANDY

His final match with Goodman had been over but a few minutes when Somerville was surrounded by the parade of promoters which is always on the trail of a new champion.

"We'll give you $5000 to scribble off an article for us," pleaded one.

"I'll make it $7500," added another, "and have one of our best writers do the work. All you have to do is to sign your name to the article."

Sandy turned them all down firmly but politely. He didn't want anything and he didn't want to hurt the feelings of the boys who do business with the "almost amateurs." His "no" was cordial but cold.

PLAYS GOLF FOR FUN

And it was no act. Somerville is truly the "perfect amateur." He plays golf because he likes the game and he plays it only in season. While other amateurs are touring the warm spots in the winter months, getting everything on the club which is sponsoring the tournament and a little "expense" money to boot, Somerville is back in Canada working and engaging in other sports.

"Sandy" is 29 . . . he graduated from an arts course at Toronto in 1925 . . . played on the Toronto varsity hockey team against Harvard . . . was named on All-Canada cricket team . . . toured Europe with Canadian rugby outfit . . . inherited chicle factory and insurance income from his father . . . is a millionaire . . . drinks no alcohol . . . not even ale . . . smokes cigarettes . . . dances a bit, but stars at bridge . . . unmarried . . . brother, Kenneth, killed in the war . . . started playing golf at 12 at St. Andrews . . . weighs 162 pounds . . . well built with broad shoulders and small hips . . . good-looking, too, with blue-gray eyes and brown, curly hair . . . plays only two or three rounds a week with a few friends . . . and wants to play no more . . . just a "perfect amateur."

NEWTON GRID PROSPECTS POOR

125 ON SQUAD BUT ONLY TWO LETTERMEN

At Newton high, perennial incubator of college football stars, football prospects this year are the leanest in a decade and maybe before that, according to Coach Ralph Sanborne.

"I don't have to tell you," the Newton coach said as he turned a sad pan on some 125 perspiring candidates rolling through their setting up drills on the gridiron behind the high school. "It's a matter of records."

Last year, Newton was opulence itself in the matter of grid material.

"I gave out 31 letters after the Brookline game," continued Sanborne. "Know how many of that 31 are back this year? Two. That's all—two."

The survivors of the Lost Battalion of 1931 are Captain Warren Huston, halfback, and Alex Kavorkian, tackle.

NINE PLAYERS NEEDED

Sanborne's able assistants, Charlie Considine and Jeff Jones drifted into the group of mourners. At the mention of Huston and Kevorkian, they seemed to sense that eulogies were being framed for the Garden City club.

"Yes," said Considine. "There's Huston and Kevorkian. They're both all right. But that's only two out of 11. And where are we going to get the other nine? Do you know?"

So they dug out the candidate list from a pile of football paraphernalia. They went through the list from one end to the other.

The data discovered revealed conclusively that Newton high's backfield must be built around Captain Huston. An All Scholastic choice in three sports, his football ability is limited to passing, kicking, running and blocking. That is to say, Huston can do about anything the signals call for. And you know who will probably call the signals? Captain Huston.

FLAGG IN BACKFIELD

Then there is 160-pound Charlie Flagg, who plays basketball and baseball for the Newton school, and Charlie Mascia, an untutored but promising Newton Frank Carideo. A fourth backfield prospect is Bob Whitney, who tips the beam at 162. These backs will do for a starter, opines Coach Sanborne. In fact, these backs will have to do for a starter.

Newton has a fine tackle mate to work on the opposite side of the line from Kevorkian in Tom Kinraide, who extends some 6 feet 2 from the sod of Clafin Field beneath his heels and weighs in the vicinity of 190 pounds. Kinraide has been ailing recently, but he still appears immovable on the line. If he is completely well on September 24, when Arlington opens the Newton schedule, the Truck Gardeners are in for a very dull afternoon trying to go places through young Mr. Kinraide.

An ex-Huntington School boy, who entered Newton high too late for eligibility last season, is probably going to land one of Sanborne's end jobs. He is six foot Charlie Houghton, an all round athlete.

FRANCIS IS PIVOT

Dick Francis has been working well at center and he will probably start the Arlington game.

Beyond these players, Sanborne refrains from picking his first string players or first string possibilities. After all, there is much to be learned by the entire squad on Claflin Field before the season opens. Sanborne will not only constantly shift his teams, but he will pick his lineups only the night before the opening game. There is still plenty of chance for the unmentioned candidates at Newton.

WALTHAM CAN WIN TWI TITLE TONIGHT

Lineups Tonight

WALTHAM	ALLSTON

Stefani, ss	J. Ziminsky, rf
Collins, 2b	Keefe, c
Kimball, lf	Lane, p

Game starts at 5:15.

Umpires—Fahey, Cleary and McCarthy.

The Waltham Town team can win the Boston Twi League championship when it plays the Hopedales of Allston at Bicycle Park in the Watch City tonight in a game starting at 5:15 p. m.

With three wins and one loss in the series for the title, the Watch City club needs but a victory tonight to cop the crown and to pull one of the biggest surprises in local semipro ball this year.

NATOLI, LANE TOSS

Natoli, who hurled Waltham to its second win in the series, will try to make it another tonight, while Harry Lane, who handed Waltham its only setback, will heave them up for the Hopedales.

Allston won both halves of the Boston Twi League campaign and was rated a large favorite to bowl over Waltham for the championship. But the Allston bats have been silenced in the pinches during the series, while Waltham has combined good pitching and timely hitting to hop into a position to end the battling tonight.

Allston has not given up hope, although it looks as though it is about to be kayoed. The boys insist that the "breaks" have gone against them, and that, with a bit of luck tonight, they can win, and go on to beat Waltham in the remaining games for the flag.

So What?

By JOE MOONEY

Something like 15,000 candidates were out kicking the political football around this season. But the squad will get its first cut today.

Some of the oratory was terrible indeed. But it's an ill wind through a dented fishhorn that doesn't blow somebody into office.

Our idea of the people's choice is the man that is first in war, first in peace, and first in line to vote for himself.

That's one thing the Depression did for you. It gave you a run for your poll tax.

And it gave the tax collector a run for his money, too. Actors aren't the only ones to get notices.

And, as Carnera would have Max Schmeling believe, we'll be suing you.

N. B. A. WOULD DROP 2 CLASSES

Baltimore, Sept. 20 (AP)—Recommendations of changes in classification of titles and the dropping from official recognition of the junior lightweight and junior welterweight championships today were before the delegates to the National Boxing Association convention here.

The suggestion of the dropping of the two classes was made yesterday by Gen. John J. Clinnin, president of the association, following his denouncement of one man managing 10 to 15 young boys and fighting them from one to six times a week, and his appeal that the association take decisive action upon the amateur fight question.

Urging the commission to seek the standardization of laws in various States to clean up corrupted ring conditions, Gen. Clinnin said, "Immature boys are becoming punch drunk wrecks as a result of exploitation."

Michigan Nine Whips Japanese

Osaka, Japan, Sept. 20 (AP)—The University of Michigan's touring baseball team added another victory to its long string over Japanese nines today, defeating Kwansai University 6 to 1. McNeal, Michigan pitcher, held the Japanese to five hits.

30-DAY RACE MEETING FOR READVILLE

Readville is soon to be the scene of Boston's first 30-day running horse meeting, proceeds of which will be used by the Boston Committee on Unemployment Relief during the coming winter. Plans have been completed by the Mass. Breeders Association.

Present plans call for the opening of the meeting on Sept. 28th. Assurances have been received that at least 500 horses will be on hand when the bugle blows for the opening event. H. D. Munroe has been named racing secretary.

Today Patrick Holland starts the work of clearing the track of substances put into it for automobile racing. For this task he will use men supplied by the City of Boston Welfare Department.

Plans call for seven races a day with features each Saturday and two stake events on the holiday, Columbus Day.

Match Play Today in Canadian Tilt

Montreal, Sept. 20 (INS)—Match play will begin in the Canadian women's golf championship tournament here today.

Mrs. Alex Gold of Beaconsfield, England, the medalist, will oppose Mrs. Harvey Martin in her opening round, while Miss Peggy Wattles, of Buffalo, runner-up for the medal honors, engages Mrs. J. A. Cameron, of Canada.

PROVIDENCE CLUB NEXT FOE FOR BRAVES

Coach Lud Wray of the Boston Braves has decided that exhibition games with the stronger semipro clubs around New England is just what the doctor ordered. And so Wray has arranged for another preliminary grid battle for his Tribe.

Next Sunday, at Providence, the Braves will take on the Providence Steam Rollers.

The Steam Rollers, with an aggregation of seasoned ex-collegians will offer the Braves much tougher competition than the Tribe experienced its first time out. And, however much the boys might like to take things easy, considering the fact that they must play a night game the following night, they will have to go under full sail against the Rhode Island club.

If plans now under negotiation go through successfully, the Braves will play an exhibition night game with the University of Peabody team at Lynn Thursday night. This game is still on the fire and definite announcement is expected today.

The U. of Peabody, not to be confused with either the Peabody pros or any of the universities around New England, is an aggregation made to order to fill the bill of a strong mid-week scrimmage for the Braves.

Wray opened the week with two long sessions. A much chastened squad worked like beavers under Wray's stentorian directions, and the coach was secretly pleased with the workout. The Penn coach inaugurated the session with a fine blast for all on the squad, and proceeded to give his cohorts the business from the opening whistle to the final play of the day.

DEDHAM HIGH TEACHERS IN 'ACE' GOLF

By BILL GRIMES

Among the hundreds of contestants who will play in the Boston Evening American Hole-In-One tournament, which starts next Tuesday at Franklin Park, will be Harold E. Cowan, Daniel J. Keegan, Edwin Peterson, John W. Wallace and Russell S. Wallace, all of whom are teachers at Dedham high school. Their spokesman, John W. Wallace confesses that they are known as the "Dedham Duffers."

The "Dedham Duffers" are an enthusiastic fivesome and are eager to test their skill or luck. If any of them manage to hole out during the tournament, the five—some will be unanimous in voting that it required the utmost skill to accomplish the feat, but if they are unsuccessful, all will claim that luck was not with them.

The Green Hill Golf Club of Worcester has entered a four-man team, composed of the three Ellingham brothers, Stanley, Harold and R. W. and Gus Nordstrom. In all probability, there will be more entrants from the Worcester "Munic" course, for the Wachusett Country Club will be well represented by Francis "Ancy" Doyle, Jimmie Dolan, Charlie Donnelly, Bill Statz, Cy Peloquin and the entire Reidy family from Jim, the father down through Jack, Bill and Leo.

SCARBORO ENTERS 60

Although the South Shore Country Club has entered more than 40 of its members, it is outnumbered by Scarboro, which will have about 60 battling for the Hon. James M. Curley Cup, which will be presented to the country or golf club having the lowest team score. Wollaston, Blue Hill, Weld, Commonwealth and Stoney Brae will be serious contenders for the trophy donated by His Honor.

Many of the leading professionals in this district will be seen in action at Franklin Park next week, including Jack Curley, the winner of the Cape Cod open at Eastward-Ho; Jack Gray and Charlie MacAndrews, Wollaston; John Bernardi, Charles River; Jim Shepherd, of the Shepherd Golf School;

Russ Hale, Commonwealth; John Ford, Blue Hill; Bill Delaney and George Ford, Needham; Marty Keane, Walpole; Bill Duffy, Albemarle; Les Cottrell, Bear Hill; Joe Rustic, Bellevue; Ken Cook and Arthur Davies, South Shore; Frank McNamara, Cohasset; Jack Leary, Scituate; Alex Bird, Marshfield; Eddie Myers, Pine Brook Valley; Bill Rafferty, Chestnut Hill; Walter Howe, Wellesley, Bud Clancy, North Shore, Ed Millen, Arlmont; George McLeod and Abe Mitchell, Belmont Spring; Ralph Thomas, Sandy Burr; Arthur Johnson and Joe Bonfilio, Weston; Jack Schneldermann, Maine, and Gene Anderson, Colonial, are other pros who will try their skill.

QUINNS IN TOURNEY

Stephen Hopkins, Charlie Mollory, Johnny and Tommie Quinn, Jimmie Conroy, Dick Conroy, Timmie O'Leary, Tom Fay, Luke Mahan, John "Ice" Kelly, Marty Kelly and Jimmie Sutherland are among the numerous entries from Brookline.

Bill Rayner, Emmett Gavin, Tom Brady, A. E. McAuliffe, and Arthur Billingham are a few of the Blue Hill Country Club representatives. Fred O. Cooney, Scarboro; Edward N. Hawkins, Bellevue; Peter Dinnenn, Pat Keefe, Joe Lagorio, Johnny Hannigan, Mike Casey, Eddie Monahan, Joe Backman, Emile Coulon of Everglades fame, Peter Bella, R. W. "Bunny" Wilson, Dick Woodsum, Stanley Neptune, John Pyne and Irving Bambridge are some of the other well known niblick wielders who will contest for the six prizes offered by the Boston Evening American.

Arthur J. Crowley, William J. "Bill" Delaney, Dave, Jack, Henry and Pat Donahue, Hon. James H. Brennan, governor's councillor, Albert Brouillard, John Lacey Delaney, Dick Finnigan, Charlie Strack, Dan Carroll, Edward Shea, and Bill McAuley, representing the Glasgo Keelies, have requested starting times.

As the deadline is midnight on Saturday next, send in your entries immediately and then watch for your starting times in next Monday's Boston Evening American.

There is NO entry fee.

THE VOICE OF Broadway

By Louis Sobol

Snapshots at Random!

Tuesday afternoon, in front of an uptown hotel, a handsome gal walks out in stocking feet and enters a cab . . . The driver, evidently convinced the woman is a dead fare, endeavors to get her out, but she refuses, and, a few seconds later, a man comes out, bearing the woman's shoes, and enters the cab . . . Tuesday night in a W. 52nd st. rendezvous . . . Helen Morgan in a bubbly mood . . . "They wanted me to go to a party at the Waldorf, but I wasn't going to dress, so I didn't go" . . . Later at the apartment of the George Sanchezes, where the Morgan lass is gifted with a pair of diamond clips and weeps . . . "I've never had diamond clips before. Look, Louie, diamond clips—" . . . Monday night at the reopening of the Village Grove Nut Club with the fog-horned-voiced, boyish-faced Harry Barris in charge . . . A typical Broadway turnout of band leaders, radio stars, vaudeville headliners and newspapermen, occupying the choice ringside tables while the ladies and gents from The Bronx, Washington Heights and Brooklyn, who have to pay, are satisfied to be seated in the rear, getting what they consider ample returns from their money by rubbing shoulders or kicking the shins of so-called celebs . . . Jack Pearl, gutteral-spouting comedian, sits quietly at the table headed by the genial George Olsen and Ethel Shutta . . . The blonde Shutta steps in front of the mike to chant a song and Olsen's lips form every word in unconscious accompaniment . . . Jack Benny rises to tell a story, Joe Lewis cuts up capers all over the floor, Art Jarrett sings, Con Conrad plays the piano, Will Osborne looks happy and Gloria Grafton shouts across the table that she won $1500 on a nag at Saratoga . . . At one ringside table sits Benny Davis, songwriter, with a flock of his new proteges, and I recall that it was Davis who first sponsored Hal Le Roy and Vilma and Buddy Ebson . . . Saturday night, bumping into Harold Meltzer, owner of the Greenwich Village Inn, and son of the famous dramatic critic of several decades ago, I remark, "You look mighty prosperous, Hal. In the money, eh?" to which he replies, "It's all front, Louis. You're being impressed by a new tie and the crease in my trousers" . . . "O, well, you never will care much for money, Harold" . . . "Sez you. I believe with Somerset Maugham that money is the sixth sense, without which you can't enjoy the other five."

In Dinty Moore's Thursday night and it strikes me for the first time that this famous restaurant draws its trade chiefly from big, well-fed looking people, for I've never seen so many stout gentlemen and stouter ladies, none of whom is familiar to me . . . Those whom I do know have the harassed look that Broadway afflicts most of us with . . . Irving Berlin settles down at the table with Sam Harris and a lad with heavy goggles sits down at a table next to us and lo and behold, it's Ben Bernie . . . Later, to the premiere of "Flying Colors" at the Imperial, a musical concoction which I find greatly to my liking from beginning to end, although it did drag here and there, particularly in the second act . . . The dead-pan drolleries of Charles Butterworth have always managed to inspire my chuckles and the suave grace of Clifton Webb, my admiration . . . The usual first night audience is there in its evening attire and its small gossip and there for the first time since her return, I spot Fannie Brice and Bee Lillie, too, and Tommy Manville, Jr., although all three are in separate parties . . . Still later, being somewhat weary of the usual night rounds, I trot around to Elmer Leterman's party at his elaborate penthouse and marvel again at the enterprise of our builders who have managed to convert what used to be waste space into sky high gardens and promenades . . . Leterman shows me his guest book, in which I spot the names of various gentlemen and ladies of reputation, all of whom endeavor to write something smart, but the wit is very feeble, I find, and scorn surges through my veins until Leterman asks me to inscribe something and I discover how anemic all my own efforts to be clever are . . . Out on the terrace, I run into Atty.-Gen'l Ottinger and over near the fountain in the reception room stands tall Sailing Baruch, Jr., conversing with pretty Aileen Wenzel, still bearing faint traces of her recent accident . . . Blonde Grace Brinkley sips slowly from a tall glass and blonde Barbara Blair beams as a portly, elderly gent exudes maudlin admiration over the tilt of her jaunty red hat.

Saturday night, we drop in for a chat with Bee Jackson to find the lass somewhat perturbed that, despite her European triumphs, Broadway producers still recall her only as the champion Charleston dancer . . . "They forget or don't know," she protests, "that years ago, I was the first to introduce the rhumba dance. They treated me wonderfully over in Paris and in Vienna. Would you like to see some pictures they took of me there?" and she flops a huge scrapbook into my lap, opening which, I study the pictures they took over there and gasp, but sneak a second and third look and then chirp weakly, the conventional, "They're certainly very artistic poses" . . .

Later that evening, in an enticing village rendezvous, known as the Allied Artists' Club, or something like that . . . Here the walls are covered with rare murals drawn by Cleon Throckmorton and we kibitz over the shoulder of Walter Marshall as he goes to defeat at backgammon, while the eyes of his pretty opponent sparkle triumphantly . . . And thence to another popular Village rendezvous, where we spot George Abbott and Phil Dunning in a huddle, and Eddie Elkins, listening with smug contentment, as a gal on each side of him chatters . . . Early Friday morning, in the Maison Royal, we watch the sad-eyed Tamara Geva, the dancer, fussing about a plate . . . The plate comes over our way and we discover that she has drawn an excellent likeness of Charles Beahan, a member of the party . . .

Wednesday night at the opening of "Clear the Wires" at the Times Square, another newspaper play, satirizing the foreign correspondent . . . The aisle-seaters enjoyed the play and most of them went back to their offices and wrote laudatory reviews, as indeed, I should have done, too, if I were still reviewing plays, for I found it highly fascinating, but I wonder whether the outside public enjoys this type of play and asked my companion, the blonde Thelma White, to which she replied, "I think it's gorgeous—only it's too bad the love interest isn't played up a little more" . . . Sunday night a week ago, at Woodmansten Inn, where everybody went just a little crazy, including the members of the orchestra, who tore off their shirts and collars and tossed saxophones and drums at each other . . . The piquant beauty, Dorothy Stone, and her sister, Paula Stone, in high spirits, but not quite as high as Songwriter J. Fred Coots, who suddenly conceived a yen for the white tie I wore and tore it off, handing me his own red, white, blue and green cravat instead . . . Coots insists that I autograph his recently acquired treasure, which I do with a grand flourish, and Mickey Alpert comes along and tears the tie from Coots and hands him his own . . . Before the evening is over, everyone has everyone else's tie, which gives you an idea how sublimely assinine a group of ordinarily well-behaved gentlemen can be . . . Bobbie Moss, a warbling gal of rare talent, introduces me to her youthful mama, and I suddenly realize how the years are creeping up on me, for the mama is younger than I am, and here, it seems, only the other day, I had been regarding myself as a callow youth of Broadway.

An interesting tableful of people at Reuben's Monday night . . . A swimming champ, Eleanor Holme . . . a tennis champ . . . Vinnie Richards . . . A golf champ, Walter Hagen . . . A champion of the people, Heywood Broun . . . and two plain folks, Con Conrad and Micky Neilan, all chewing away vigorously on amply stuffed sandwiches . . . Earlier in the evening, at the reopening of "Counsellor-At-Law," Richard Barthelmess and his wife, pretending not to enjoy the solicitous request of the autograph army . . .

"Mind Your Own Business" Good Business Slogan, Writes L. E. Kirstein

One thing that is wrong with business is that business men do not attend to it, according to Louis E. Kirstein, noted Boston philanthropist, vice president of [illegible] and one of the nation's leading business authorities. As an authority on problems of industry and philanthropy, Mr. Kirstein is in constant demand to take part in conferences and [illegible] where the question of "What's the matter with business" is to be considered. Therefore, his striking statement, in the Atlantic Monthly for October, takes on an added significance. It doubtless will come as considerable of a shock to the country's so-called business geniuses, as well as to the "experts" whose names constantly appear in the public prints as members of various conferences that are now so popular.

"What I really mean is that they do not attend to their own business," continues Mr. Kirstein. "This may offer a clue to an important factor underlying our present crisis."

Further extracts from Mr. Kirstein's article follow:

Practical demonstration that a man can do one thing well does not by any means constitute evidence that he can do everything well. And yet because of the possible prestige of their names, has been the fate—or shall I say the temptation?—of many business men to take on so many responsibilities one after another outside of their own offices that they have ended up by doing nothing permanently well or thoroughly good; and, what is more serious, by having neglected their own immediate jobs in factory, store, bank, [illegible] may happen to be.

Take the example [illegible] [illegible] ge business [illegible]

L. E. KIRSTEIN

[illegible] nd employes and an annual turnover of many millions of dollars. Through his job he became known some years ago as an efficient organizer. No sooner had he gained this business recognition than he was asked to [illegible] chairman of one board and committee after another, until today he finds himself involved in so many different responsibilities that he cannot possibly find the time or energy—to say nothing of the [illegible] knowledge and skill required for the satisfactory fulfillment of any of them. Naturally [illegible] significant—the problems of his own business can hardly receive [illegible] and concen[illegible] which these try[illegible]

An American Habit

T[illegible] individual experience [illegible] opinion a general [illegible] the American public [illegible] dangerous excess. We are tending more and more to draft for important public responsibilities a few business men who already carry upon their shoulders the heavy burdens of their own office.

Consider as an outstanding, yet [illegible] example of what happens straight down the line the case of Mr Owen D. Young, who [illegible] earned the [illegible] one of our [illegible]. His regular [illegible] one from which, I as[illegible] his chief income [illegible] of the Board [illegible] Electric Co. Here [illegible] of the largest corporations [illegible] the world, transacting each year hundreds of millions of dollars [illegible]. To direct [illegible] of this huge in[illegible] would seem job enough for even a man with the calibre of Mr. Young.

Now let us see what has happened to him. There is hardly a problem that comes up in this country, whether it be commercial, industrial, financial, educational, or international, that is not put to Mr. Young for solution.

I very much question whether anyone could do what Mr. Young is expected to do. Only God could do it.

"Pyramiding" Leaders

In [illegible], the American public [illegible] that model which it is now criticizing so sharply in finance. We have not only "pyramided" our financial structure, we have also "pyramided" our leadership; and, in my opinion, "pyramided" leadership is the more serious danger.

It is not hard to understand, of course, why leadership tends toward pyramiding; indeed, to be named to one committee leads to membership on the next just as naturally as one holding company can generate a pyramid. For our American model of leadership, like our financial pyramids and the house that Jack built, grows by its own momentum.

If the very natural development of pyramided leadership is easy to understand, its dangers are equally obvious. No man, however great his native ability (and we must remember that "genius" is a very rare [illegible]) can carry several major complex responsibilities at the same time. A general knowledge of many related fields every specialist in practical affairs should have. But the mastery of the complicated data required for responsible decision in such various matters as reparations, public finance, banking, social work, transportation, industrial relations, no one man can have, not only as long as he wishes also to carry his own business job effectively, but, indeed, as long as he remains a mere man. He ends by doing nothing as well as it can or should be done.

Might Have Averted It

If Mr. Young, for instance, had been permitted to apply himself to studying his own pay rolls and personnel problems as profoundly as he studied the agenda of the President's Second Conference on Industrial Relations, it is at least possible to wonder whether the General Electric Co. might not have built up unemployment reserves before the depression. And if the General Electric Co. and a score or more of our larger concerns had applied themselves to the task of establishing unemployment reserves the whole question of stabilized employment would soon have come to the fore. More secure employment, plus the high wage policy which was already winning a steadily widening endorsement could have promoted the continuing effective demand so essential to mass production, and therefore, necessarily, to mass distribution. The ultimate conclusion of such a chain of reasoning needs hardly to be pointed.

I am not saying, of course, that these things would have saved us from the present depression; it is, I fear, a more complex matter than that. But I do feel that they might have mitigated its severity and the suffering it has brought. I am sure that without them we can gain no insurance against other depressions after this.

The important thing to remember, and the one I am urging, is that each function—whether it be coordinating activities, individual industrial management, or public affairs in their manifold ramifications—is a specialty with its own techniques and skills. No man can handle more than one of them in a truly responsible fashion. To pyramid leadership is to dissipate responsibility.

MRS. MILLER TO WED LANCASTER

Miami, Fla., Sept. 20 (AP)—James E. Forrester of the Federal Labor Department said today he had learned that Capt. William N. Lancaster, British war flier and third side of the love triangle which collapsed with death of Haden Clarke, plans to marry Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller—the woman in the case.

Captain Lancaster now is in Waterbury, Vt., seeking the consent of his mother to the proposed union, Forrester said, having left Miami September 12 for that announced purpose.

The marriage date, set for the "earlier possible moment" by Lancaster in his statement to Forrester, is contingent on the British pilot obtaining a divorce from a wife in England.

METHODISTS GO SOCIALISTIC

Wooster, O., Sept. 20 (AP)—Socialized ownership and control of the country's [illegible] and industrial systems as a substitute for capitalism was recommended today in a report adopted by the Northeast Ohio Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

"Capitalism," the report said, "has been weighed and found wanting. The tragedy of the present hour makes change imperative. An economic system which permits manipulation for profit of processes which are vital to the well-being of all people must be set aside or fundamentally changed so that the chief end of our economic activity to meet the needs of all will be achieved."

The report, submitted by Dr. Charles B. Ketcham of Warren [illegible] was adopted [illegible] viva voce vote with little debate. The conference is one of the ch[illegible]

RUNNING WATER
FREEZES CLEAR . . . . .

You've seen the film of ice that forms over a brook. It is always clear—transparent. Ice on a pond is cloudy—opaque. The reason is that water in motion always freezes clear. And that is the reason why Boston Ice is frozen from water that is constantly agitated—vigorously aerated every minute of the freezing time. Each cake of Boston Ice is crystal-clear—outward sign of the painstaking care that Boston takes to give you healthful, appetizing ice, at no extra cost.

How Nominees Stand In Nation-Wide Poll

Washington, Sept. 20—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nationwide Presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in co-operation with all other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

It also shows the majority each candidate has in each State in which he is leading.

In addition, it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each State, as compared with the last preceding report from the State. These State reports are usually a week apart.

The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each State where he has improved his position, as compared with the last preceding report from that State.

KIDNAPERS FREE NEW YORK HEIR

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—A kidnap band which restored John Arthur Russell, eight, to his wealthy father when the hunt became too hot was sought throughout New York and the East today.

[illegible] and held for $25,000, the boy was returned [illegible] last night to the Brooklyn home of his father, Arthur S. Russell, broker.

Young Russell was so tired that police refrained from questioning him extensively until today. On his way home from school yesterday, he said, two men [illegible] him and took him to a flat where they gave [illegible].

[illegible] the evening he said a woman and another man [illegible] and the woman took him home.

TROOPS OUT TO QUELL FEUD

Manchester, Ky., Sept. 20 (AP)—Though their commanding officer admitted troops were of slight value in quelling feud outbreaks, eight National Guardsmen patrolled Manchester today while a special grand jury investigated Sunday's shooting, which claimed two lives and resulted in injury to several other men.

Adjt. Gen. Denhardt, after surveying the situation, returned to Frankfort and reported to Governor Laffoon that "soldiers will not solve the problem." He reduced the force of guardsmen on duty here from 25 to eight.

"These men will shoot wherever they meet," Denhardt said, after conferring with the Governor. "It is up to the local authorities to work out their salvation. We can put down a riot or insurrection, but there is nothing we can do against an ambuscade."

Turkey in League Meeting

Instanbul, Turkey, Sept. 20 (AP)—Foreign Minister Tewfik Rushdi Bey left for Geneva today, heading Turkey's first delegation as a member of the League of Nations.

Flee Homes in Flood

New Orleans, Sept. 20—Residents of Terrebonne parish began evacuating their homes yesterday afternoon as a storm pushed high tides from the Gulf over the country.

Reds Fail in Try to Heckle Queen Wilhelmina

The Hague, Netherlands, Sept. 20 (AP)—While Queen Wilhelmina was reading the speech from the throne at the opening of the States General today, two Communist members of the Lower House shouted "Down with the Queen!" "Down with Royalty!"

Undisturbed by the demonstration, she never paused, but went on in a firm voice. The disturbers were hustled out and the assembly, after singing the national anthem, cheered the Queen.

Father Confesses He Killed Boy, Say Police

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—William Henry Tubbs, 32, of Flushing admitted today, police said, that he had killed his six-year-old son, William, Sept. 9.

Police also said he confessed he had planned to kill his wife and other son prompted by overhearing his brother-in-law and father-in-law remark they did not want his disgrace of passing worthless checks brought upon the family.

HADASSAH PICKS MRS. HALPRIN

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Mrs. Samuel W. Halprin of Brooklyn today was elected national president of Hadassah, women's Zionist organization, at the closing session of the organization's 18th annual convention.

Mrs. Halprin, a vice-president for the last year, succeeded Mrs. Edward Jacobs of New York, who left after the close of the meeting for a year's stay in Palestine, where Hadassah's work in providing medical and hospital care for Jews there is centered.

Officers re-elected were Mrs. Robert Szold, Pelham, N. Y.; Mrs. Pearl Franklin, Chicago, and Mrs. Henry Harris, San Francisco, vice-presidents; Mrs. Samuel J. Rosensohn, New York, treasurer; Mrs. Moses P. Epstein, New York, secretary, and Miss Sulamith Schwartz, Brooklyn, president of Junior Hadassah.

"Nature in the Raw is seldom MILD"

OUTLAW OF THE JUNGLE . . . "Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the great animal painter, Paul Bransom . . . inspired by the leopard's fierce fighting power and relentless hunt for prey which makes him the terror of every beast of the African jungle.

—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes

They are not present in Luckies . . . the mildest cigarette you ever smoked

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

"It's toasted"
That package of mild Luckies

"If a man write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse-trap than his neighbor, tho he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door."—RALPH WALDO EMERSON.
Does not this explain the world-wide acceptance and approval of Lucky Strike?

THIS IS LIFE

IF ONLY CANDIDATES AND KIN VOTE TODAY, POLL WILL SET RECORD

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

R. E. ROGERS

POLITICAL EXPERTS TELL us that today there will be a snow storm of ballots. Indeed, they remark, if only the candidates themselves, their friends and relatives, their sisters and their cousins and their aunts, go to the polls, the result will be the largest vote cast in these parts for many, many years. Arthur Hopkins, the theatrical manager, once wrote a little book called "How's Your Third Act?" The theme being that if you asked anybody in New York, no matter whom, how his play was progressing, he would at once burst into a flood of technical detail.

One gathers from the public prints that if today one were to ask the chance acquaintance how his candidacy is getting along, you would get the same sort of answer. The ballots, we understand, are to be furnished the voters all wound up on reels and the completed affair will look like one of these Chinese inscriptions that hang on the wall.

Various of the great dead have commented on this sort of thing, and with what resources I have down in the country, I want to try to pass it on to you. The first is from W. S. Gilbert's song in "The Gondoliers," the music by Arthur Sullivan. I can't furnish the music, but the words are not bad. And the truth applies as well in a democracy as in a monarchy.

Gilbert on Direct Primary System

There lived a King, as I've been told.
In the wonder working days of old.
When hearts were twice as good as gold
And twenty times as mellow;
Good temper triumphed in his face
And in his heart he found a place
For all the erring human race
And every wretched fellow.

When he had Rhenish wine to drink
It made him very sad to think
That some, at junket or at jink,
Must be content with toddy.
He wished all men as rich as he (And he was rich as rich could be
So to the top of every tree
Promoted everybody.

Lord Chancellors were cheap as sprats
And Bishops in their shovel hats
Were plentiful as tabby cats—
In point of fact, too many;
Ambassadors cropped up like hay,
Prime ministers and such as they Grew like asparagus in May,
And Dukes were three a penny.

On every side Field Marshals gleamed,
Small beer were Lord Lieutenants deemed,
With Admirals the ocean teemed
All round his wide dominions,
And Party Leaders you might meet
In twos and threes on every street
Maintaining with no little heat,
Their various opinions.

That King, although no one denies
His heart was of abnormal size,
Yet he'd have acted otherwise
If he had been acuter.
The end is easily foretold,
When every blessed thing you hold
Is made of silver or of gold,
You long for simple pewter.

When you have nothing else to wear
But cloth of gold and satins rare,
For cloth of gold you cease to care
Up goes the price of shoddy.

In short, whoever you may be,
To this conclusion you'll agree,
When everyone is somebodee,
Then no one's anybody!

Pointed enough, but perhaps too frivolous for these serious times. I'll give you another, serious enough, this time by one of the greatest political thinkers in our language, the great Irishman, Edmund Burke.

Edmund Burke on Office Holding

"You do not imagine that I wish to confine power, authority and distinction to blood, names and titles. No, sir. There is no qualification for government but virtue and wisdom, actual or presumptive. Wherever they are actually found, they have in whatever state, condition, profession, or trade, the passport of Heaven to human place and honor. Woe to the country which would impiously reject the service of the talents and virtues, civil, military, or religious, given to grace and to serve it.

"Woe to that country, too, that passing into an opposite extreme, considers a low education, a mean, contracted view of things, a sordid mercenary occupation, as a preferable title to command. Such descriptions of men ought not to suffer oppression from the state, but the state suffers oppression if such as they, either individually or collectively, are permitted to rule. In this you think you are combatting prejudice, but you are at war with nature.

"Everything ought to be open; but not indifferently to every man. I do not hesitate to say that the road to eminence and power from obscure condition ought not to be made too easy, nor a thing too much of course. If rare merit be the rarest of all rare things, it ought to pass through some sort of probation. The temple of honor ought to be seated on an eminence. If it be opened through virtue, let it be remembered, too, that virtue is never tried but by some difficulty and some struggle."

Massachusetts has always acted pretty much on this doctrine. This is no time to abandon it!

LOST HIS FAITH IN M'KNIGHT, SAYS O'BRIEN

Co-defendant in the Bank Suit Says His Confidence Went When He Heard Report

Harry C. O'Brien, of Medford, one of the 22 defendant directors of the closed Medford Trust Co., whom Bank Commissioner Guy seeks to hold liable for the losses of the bank, testified today before Charles W. Blood, master, that he lost confidence in Edwin T. McKnight when the bank commissioner's report for 1930 was read at a directors' meeting.

Up to that time, O'Brien said, he had explicit confidence in the business ability and integrity of McKnight, who was president of the closed bank.

TALKED WITH HACKETT

Continuing his replies to questions of Robert T. Bushnell, representing the bank commissioner, O'Brien said he talked with George Hacket, manager of a Medford theater, before voting on loans for the completion of the Leominster theater.

Hackett told the witness that the most important thing for the success of the theater was whether or not first run pictures could be obtained.

McKnight told the directors at the meeting when the final loan was voted, that negotiations were under way to sell the house to a chain, and that the chances of the sale were "very good."

Before the hearing was resumed this morning, Attys George H. Lucey and George B. Hayward, defence counsel, obtained a 10 days suspension at the conclusion of the state's case, so that they can prepare the defence.

RUM BOAT CASE TO GRAND JURY

After a 10-day investigation seeking to link the seized liquor smuggling yacht Prudence with a rum ring extending from Boston to Maine, Nova Scotia, Rhode Island and New York, the case was placed before the grand jury today.

The yacht, valued at approximately $200,000, was seized in the harbor Sept. 10. Her captain, Norman McWilliams, and a crew of six were arrested, and in secret compartments, 99 barrels of whiskey and 1329 cases of assorted liquor were found. A search for her registered owner, Manson M. Dillaway, is being made.

TRIO JAILED IN AUTO HOLDUP

Three Marlboro young men who robbed Albert Langlois, a Marlboro motorist, and his girl of $12 and their auto on July 7 was sentenced in Middlesex Superior Court today to long terms in Concord reformatory. They pleaded guilty.

Clyde Smith was sentenced to six years on the robbery charge and an indefinite term for breaking and entering. His brother, Charles Smith, was given five years, and Robert J. Anthony got give years for the robbery and an indefinite term for burglary. Ralph Hogan, who also pleaded guilty to the charges, was placed on probation because he had no previous record and aided the authorities.

Rubio's Ex-Wife Killed

Mexico City, Sept. 20—Senora Francisca Aceves, first wife of former President Rubio, was killed yesterday near Cuernavaca in a motor accident.

THREE HEARTS THAT BEAT AS ONE IN HAPPIEST REUNION

"WON'T YOU FORGIVE ME? I'LL BE A GOOD DOG."

Spot has returned to the home of his master, Leo Shea, Jr., 41 Browning rd., Somerville, and joy again is unconfined. He had been missing since Sunday. Leo was disconsolate. The neighbors were aroused. The police had joined the search. Then Spot came home—on the eve of his six months' birthday. He begged forgiveness as eloquently as any dog could.

YES, I CAN'T HELP IT, I LOVE YOU SO"

And with a resounding kiss and a glad cry, that matched perfectly a happy yelp, Leo forgave him. You can see how it was done. Tomorrow, Leo is six, too—six years to Spot's six months. Now, there'll be a double birthday party. What of the third heart? You ask. Oh, that's on Spot's forehead. That's why he's so loving—he has two hearts. (Staff photos.)

TWIN-HEARTED DOG IS BACK

Spot is sentimental, but he doesn't wear his heart on his sleeve—because he hasn't got a sleeve. He wears his heart instead on the top of his head.

However, Spot has another and a warmer heart even than the one atop his short-haired scalp. He has a heart which wouldn't let him miss tomorrow when his young master, Charles Leo Shea, Jr., of 41 Browning rd., Somerville, celebrates his sixth birthday.

Of course it is Spot's birthday, too, the pup being six months old tomorrow, but Spot was mainly concerned with his master's happiness when the dog returned again after being missing and mourned since last Sunday.

Two birthday celebrations tomorrow, then—but the real joy is for the return of Spot, the dog with a heart on his head.

Collegiate Hop Coming Back to Give Grace to Dancing

Despite a decided trend toward conservation in ballroom dancing for the past two years, the erstwhile "popular" collegiate "hop" will come back into its own during the winter.

Such was the prediction of Mrs. Edna Passapae, one of New York's foremost dancing instructors, when she appeared before the opening session of the annual convention of the Boston Dancing Teachers Club at the Y. W. C. A. today.

"Two years of awkward positions and stilted steps have driven younger dancers back to the free and easy hop and drag numbers," she said. "But the time given to struggling for grace and rythm with the old-time waltzes and two-steps has not been wasted.

"The boisterousness and cavorting all over the floor that marked the hops of yesterday will be no more. The collegiate numbers will be modified. The swaying and dipping motions will come from the waist rather than from the knees and the hips.

"A very popular step is sure to be the 'Earhart Hop' introduced by Lucille Stoddart of the New York Dancers' Club. It can be executed in either the open or half open positions of the body. It has several new cross and side steps, but they are not difficult to learn.

"Another new number that has won favor at Newport this summer is the 'New Yorker.' It combines the Chasse with the straight fox trot pace. It is smart and can be danced to either very fast or moderate music."

Mrs. Passapae predicts a certain comeback for the Tango.

Fore River Bridge Closed for Repairs

The Fore River Bridge between Quincy and Weymouth will be closed between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m. tomorrow and Thursday while necessary repairs will be made to the bridge. Detours for north bound traffic will be over Quincy ave. and Washington st., Quincy, to Bickford sq., Weymouth.

Phone In News Tips, Liberty 4000, and Win $50 in Weekly Prizes

Do you want to make some money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American is presenting the opportunity. Every week a total of $50 in prizes will be offered for news tips telephoned in to the American News-Tip Editor at Liberty 4000. And what is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to the people of Greater Boston and adjacent cities has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an important meeting is scheduled for a certain date, that an accident has happened, that there is going to be a business merger, that a celebrity is coming to town? That's a news tip. There will be given $25 weekly for the best first exclusive news tip received, $10 for the next best, $5 for the next best and $1 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips. The first tip on a story wins. Do not send in minor stories that everyone sees. Good exclusive pictures are wanted, too.

VISIT TO JUDGE HALTS REPORT

Because Max Waldo Cohen, a Boston attorney, had visited the home of Supreme Court Justice Edward P. Pierce, the latter today refused to hear the report against Cohen in the investigation by William H. Hitchcock into alleged fraudulent claims in auto accidents.

When Atty. Hitchcock arose to conduct the case against Cohen, Justice Pierce stated that the accused attorney had visited his home and that he told Cohen he could not discuss the case.

The court said he presumed Cohen's visit was not for the purpose of influencing him, but stated that the incident precluded his sitting in the case.

The report was impounded and the case continued until next Thursday.

SOUTH END MAN HELD AS KILLER

On a warrant charging the slaying of a South End Negress last night, Porthur Allen, Negro, 32, of Northampton st., South End, was arrested by Cambridge police today.

Allen admitted he slashed the throat of Mrs. Mabel Perry, 3[illegible], during a party in her Northampton st. home. He was walking by the Central sq. Cambridge police station when Patrolman McLaughlin recognized him as the man wanted for the slashing.

Bank Receiver Asks Right to Make Sale

Herbert Fearson, receiver of the closed Federal Bank, has filed a petition in federal court asking permission to sell the property at 487-489 Southampton st., South Boston, an asset of the bank, for $1400.

DAUGHTER SAYS HE SLEEPS IN HENHOUSE

Court Continues Hearing for Mental Test of Warren R. Glover of Wellesley

A motion for a habeas corpus writ to free Warren Randolph Glover, retired lumber dealer of 9 Pine Ridge rd., Wellesley Hills, from the Medfield State Hospital, was heard today by Judge Pierce in Supreme Court.

Glover was committed to the hospital for a 35-day observation period on Aug. 26, after his daughter, Mrs. Maude M. Fogg of Wellesley Hills, told police he had been sleeping in a henhouse.

Judge Pierce heard several witnesses and continued the case until Friday. He ordered Earl K. Holt, superintendent of the hospital, to make a special examination of Glover.

BOOKED AS VAGRANT

The petition was brought by Herbert B. Morse of 55 Clifford rd., Wellesley, an importer, who said Glover was superintending the building of a rock garden for him when he was committed.

Morse said he never saw anything wrong with Glover, and Morse's wife, Mrs. Mary B. Morse, testified Glover was of high intelligence.

Supt. Holt testified he had not been able to form a conclusion as to Glover's mind and wished to keep the man for the full 35 day period.

A Wellesley police sergeant testified Glover was booked as a vagrant while he had $14 in his pocket and that the booking was done after Mrs. Fogg complained as to Glover's alleged actions.

COMPLAINS OF COMPANY

Mrs. Frances Sullivan, of 33 Washington st., Wellesley, testified that he boarded with her for a week on one occasion. He left, she said, after he had complained to her about company that went to his daughter's house.

Other testimony was introduced that the man made threats against some member of the family. The exact nature of the threats was not divulged.

CALLAN'S FIGHT SHIFTS HERE

On the same day in 1929 that he and his wife transferred their 21-acre estate to a servant, the servant transferred it to the wife, it was brought out today in a new battle between the Rev. John J. Callan and Mrs. Mary Hemenway Callan, who now are divorced.

The battle of the Callans shifted to a new front today, the Suffolk County courthouse, on two bills of equity filed by the couple, in one of which the ex-wife seeks to evict the minister from the Wellesley home.

In the other, the former rector of fashionable St. Andrew's in Wellesley, seeks to halt the eviction and asks a ruling to the effect that the property is owned jointly by them.

Atty. Edward F. McClennen, representing Mrs. Callan, read the deds under which two parcels, now one, wer purchased by John and Mary Callan on June 8 and 9, 19[illegible], one of the parcels being purchased from the Dana Hall School for $45,000.

On November 12, 1929, the couple deeded the property to Rose Lillian Emery, a servant, and on the same day she deeded the property to Mary H. Callan.

Both bills in equity, being heard by Judge Frank S. Deland as master, were filed on August 24 when Mrs. Callan installed two agents on the premises in Cartwright rd., Wellesley, and when Callan, through his court action, succeeded in having them ordered off.

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

Harry Shoulder-Pats Clara!

(Editor's Note: Harry Richman answers us)

"Dear Miss Siemens: You've asked me what I think of Clara Bow—the greatest love affair that I have ever had was with a bright red-haired girl called Clara Bow. I am sure she will always be a red-haired girl—no changing hair colors and styles for her—as she has the grand faculty of being herself at all times, and styles mean nothing to her. I am sure when she will reappear on the screen in her next effort it will be the greatest picture of her career, as she has always wanted to play just such a part as she takes in this picture. I know that the public will see and be convinced that Clara Bow is the greatest screen artist ever to appear on the screen."

Press Chaperoned 'Em

"The greatest mistake I have ever made was to allow the press to run our love affair, instead of leaving us alone to get married. Rex Bell, Clara's husband, in my mind is the luckiest man in the world and I am sure he realizes this. So until I find another Clara Bow, whether she is on the screen or a waitress in Childs, I will continue in my little humble way and hope and pray."

Richman's Ideal Gal

"If I were fortunate enough now I would like to do just one thing—buy a 180-foot schooner and spend the rest of my days living gayly, as I traveled 'round the world on my own yacht. This, of course, would only be possible if I found my ideal girl. My ideal girl is one who is vivacious, yet retiring, intelligent . . . Rather plump in form, as thin women are always dieting, which brings a lot of sickness . . . Most important of all, she must have a strong personality, and this in preference to all the beauty in the world! (Editor's note—There you are, Boston lasses—just a large order to fill for Broadway's singing sophisticate!) . . . Sincerely, Harry Richman."

We Tell on Harry:

While visiting Mr. Richman back stage at the Metropolitan [illegible] our chat, we gathered that he's convinced that his public caught up on him in revues and that's why he's trying something different in the pictures [illegible] . . . That even though [illegible] Richman is better now than he was a few years back that he knows different . . . It's the P. A. system that carries his voice and personality to every nook and corner of the huge theatres . . . After a week's rest he returns for five weeks at the New York Paramount . . . That he's more than [illegible] dollars he's [illegible] . . . That we suspect it's carnation toilet water he uses . . . Boston Actress' Suicide Laid to Failure in Movies

Friends of Lillian M. 'Peg' Entwistle, 24, New York stage star and former leading lady of the old Jewett Repertory company here, today ascribed her suicide in Hollywood to her failure to repeat in moving pictures her success on the stage.

The young woman committed suicide last Friday by leaping to her death from a 5[illegible]-foot electric sign.

The young actress had been at the movie capital for some months and had been struggling to gain a foothold in the moving pictures. She had secured only obscure bits in various pictures until she was chosen for a part in "Thirteen Women" and friends said her work in the picture had been outstanding.

However, the film was shelved for changes, a fact which friends claim was the last crushing disappointment for the young actress.

A note found in her pocketbook gave a brief clue to the reason for her act. The note read:

"I'm afraid I am a coward. I am sorry for everything. If I had done this long ago, it would have saved a lot of pain."

The girl's uncle said she left his home Friday saying she had a "rendezvous with a friend." That was the last he saw of her [illegible]

Friends said a domestic [illegible] also weighed heavily on the young actress. She was divorced in M[illegible] 1929 from Robert Lee Keith, [illegible] actor. She charged cruelty, [illegible] ing he tore her from [illegible] that he failed to tell her he had been previously married and was the father of a 6-year-old [illegible]

Miss Entwistle started her theatrical career in Boston [illegible] years ago when Walter Hampden secured a part for her with the Jewett company. She later obtained recognition on Broadway for her work in the Theater Guild.

She was best known [illegible] way for her work in [illegible] which she attained [illegible]

HULTMAN HOLDS DOLE REPORT

The police department's long awaited report on its investigation of 500 dole cases expected to show a high percentage of fraud, will be delivered to the mayor's office this afternoon, Commissioner Hultman stated positively today.

At the same time it was learned at the commissioner's office that the delivery of the report has been purposely delayed because, in some quarters, it might erroneously have been construed as an attempt to influence the primary vote.

The report consists of a 10-page summary and 500 pages, with each case treated individually on a separate page, giving the police version of the case, the welfare department version, and the opinion of Leo Schwartz, police legal adviser, as to whether fraud, perjury or larceny are present in each case.

Zionist to Banquet De Haas Tonight

IRELAND IS NEAR TO PEACE OVER BRITISH OATH

William H. O'Brien Sees End of Tariff War; Warns U. S. to Stay Out of Europe

The Irish oath of allegiance to England will be abolished, but the bitter tariff war will be settled by friendly arbitration and the two countries will live beside each other in peace and comfort for many years to come.

This was the prediction made today by William H. O'Brien, the Boston orator and director of telephones and telegraph for Massachusetts, upon his return from a six-weeks' survey of conditions in the two countries.

"The Irish are making extraordinary progress in industry and business," said O'Brien. "Their commercial independence is strengthening their desire for political independence. President De Valera is astonishingly popular. He seems to have gauged the public sentiment of his people correctly.

"Elsewhere in Europe there is unrest, dissatisfaction, hatred, jealousy and all the elements that make for war. There will not be peace and amity in Europe until France undoes the frightful errors of the Versailles treaty, which divided the people of Europe on economic instead of on cultural lines. England is suspicious of France and all the others are suspicious of each other.

"We ought to keep out of the mess. Stay here and build up America. If they have any more wars abroad, let them fight them out alone."

EMPLOYMENT IN BAY STATE UP 12 PER CENT

Wages Increase 13.7 Per Cent Over July, Official Figures to Commissioner Smith Reveal

Employment and wage earnings are on the upgrade in Massachusetts industries, according to a report today by Commissioner Edwin S. Smith of the State Department of Labor and Industries.

Reports from 1078 representative manufacturing establishments showed an increase in August in employment of 12.3 per cent from the record low point reached in July, by far the largest increase for any August in the past seven years.

The amount of wages paid increased 13.7 per cent, which was even greater than the increase in employment.

Wool and cotton goods industries showed the biggest rise in both employment and wages. An increase of 35.3 per cent in employment and 44.3 per cent in payrolls was noted in cotton, and wool showed an increase of 31.4 per cent in employment and 44.7 per cent in wages. Boots and shoes and dyeing and finishing textiles also showed large gains.

Lowell led the cities showing the best improvement in both divisions. Employment increased 53.[illegible] per cent and payrolls increased 54.5 per cent.

New Bedford showed an increase in employment of 12.8 per cent and twice that in payrolls in August over July. Fall River's employment rose 19.4 per cent and wages rose 21.5 per cent. Lawrence industries showed an increase in employment of 11 per cent and 16.9 per cent in payrolls.

BEACON HILL

—by—

Betty Alden

THE SOCIAL SEASON OPENED LAST EVENING WITH the first performance of "Reunion in Vienna" . . . Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt shocking the tabbies and making them like it . . .

MRS. W. C. MINER

The audience was a sort of society reunion in Boston . . . many familiar faces having returned from their summer sojourns to swell the packed house of first-nighters . . . every seat in the entire house was filled.

Whether you like caviare or no, you will be delighted with this exciting play . . . it tingles!

Lynn Fontanne is as beautiful as every woman wishes she could be, and her gowns, soft trailing chiffons and velvets, are dreamy. Could you wonder that the Archduke did not forget her in 10 years . . . ? But it would have been a different story if she had grown obese in the interim . . . romance is a matter of contours.

There was such a jam of gay and glittering humans blocking the aisles and lobbies, we had a bit of a squeeze to distinquish the affectionately termed BEST people . . . a phrase we frankly admit of which we do not know the meaning

At any rate, among the best-looking was Elizabeth Cram . . . popularly known as Betty . . . daughter of the Ralph Crams and a debutante of last season, looking simply marvelous in a satin and velvet costume. She is a petite blonde and it was easy to see that Frank Blake, who escorted her, thought she was sw[illegible] . . .

Another vivacious and golden-locked Circe in velvet and huge white fox was Mrs. Andrew J. Winslow, Jr., with her handsome husband, her sister, Miss Louise Condit, and Mr. Edgar Anthony. The Winslows have travelled about all summer and are now settled on Beacon Hill again for the winter

Greets Subscribers

AS FRESH AS A DAISY after weeks of earnest endeavor in regard to the coming theater season with the Professional Players and Theater Guild society, Rebeckah Hobbs greeted her subscribers cordially, living up to her promise of giving us some fine shows this winter. In her party were her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs . . . Mrs. Hobbs very stunning in ivory satin . . . and Mr. Percy Blair.

IN CREME SATIN TRIMMED with dark fur, Mrs. Guilford Stewart and Mr. Stewart enjoyed the play [illegible].

MR. AND MRS. HENRY C. COLT of Brattle st., Cambridge, whose party included Miss Jeanette Paische, a striking brunette. Mrs. Colt was very [illegible] in beige lace . . . her friend's gown was a long trailing affair of white crepe banded with brilliants around the bodice. There is going to be a great deal of white and ivory worn this season, some lavishly trimmed with dark furs.

IT WAS PLEASANT TO greet Mrs. James J. Storrow back to town . . . She was very much the real lady in grey floating chiffons . . . And another lady whom we very much admire is [illegible]

* * *

MRS. MALCOLM BRADLEY FRENCH, president of the Charlotte Cushman Club, who attended, also attired in a soft grey chiffon with graceful cape arrangement over the shoulders. Mr. French accompanied his charming wife, who is always turned out in the very [illegible] mode

Charming Smile

FIRST NIGHTS ARE SUCH fun . . . young and not so young mingle happily . . . mothers, daughters, aunts and cousins.

* * *

MRS. ADOLPH LEEDS, A tall and slender brunette, never misses a first night, and she was accompanied by Miss Felice, whose ambitions may even include such a part as "Elene" in 'Reunion in Vienna". . . she has histrionic aspirations.

A VERY LOVELY PERSON, with a charming smile, is Mrs. W. C. Miner . . . and we feel sure that Mrs. Miner did not lose ONE of the finer points of the play . . . there is a glance in her eye that tells us she understands much about life. Her black satin gown was long and sleek.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. FRANK J. OAKES were there . . . and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Downing . . . Mr. and Mrs. Horace Frazer of [illegible] . . .

FROM CHESTNUT HILL also came Mr. and Mrs. George Bramwell Baker.

White Satin Gown

BARBARA BREMER, daughter of the ever popular Mr. and Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer, was in street dress with the new white cowl [illegible] by a beau [illegible] has a cavalier [illegible] along.

* * *

MRS. WILLIAM DANA ORCUTT [illegible] never looked better than in the gorgeous white [illegible] gown and matching evening [illegible] when she wore [illegible].

AND STILL ANOTHER LADY who chose the ivory tone was [illegible] Hughes in a pretty [illegible] gown with orchids.

MANY OF BOSTON'S DEBS and post-debs are pretty well pleased to [illegible] giotti and Edward Briggs are back from an extensive trip abroad. We might add that these [illegible] Boston [illegible] at this writing.

PRETTY KITTY TALBOT who has always been very fond of [illegible] boats to [illegible] has been spending the greater part of the summer on [illegible].

THE ALVAN T. FULLERS gave a very successful dinner party at their home in Rye, N. H., last week. The party was for their daughter Lydia, who is making her debut this winter. Among the season's debs who attended were Ellen Bottomley, daughter of Mrs. John T. Bottomley, and sister of the ever popular John, Jim and George. Ellen is very attractive and is sure to have a good time this winter.

They're [illegible] Victorian costumes [illegible] the use of the fan as an article of warfare.

We may even return to [illegible]

Though we may be severe [illegible] tailored in the daytime, we are [illegible] all sorts of romantic costumes after dark.

We are going in for velvets and [illegible] metal brocades in our dinner gowns.

We are crowing over little Victorian fur capelets and all kinds of fussy jabots and frills and [illegible] even on our tailored street things.

We are appreciating anew the magic that a bit of lace can work in a costume.

We are [illegible] and wearing little hats tilted forward over our eyes in the manner of the Gibson girl.

We are [illegible] over Victorian jewelry and are [illegible] through the family safe deposit boxes to bring out old lockets and [illegible] and watches that pin on.

We are wearing old-fashioned brooches and [illegible].

We are [illegible]

We are [illegible] sleeves again and evening skirts show a [illegible] tendency to fullness.

We are wearing velvet trimming on practically everything.

We are concentrating on beautiful, glamorous fabrics for our gowns.

We are lavishing our attention on furs.

We're going to be fascinating or bust.

'Reunion in Vienna' Wins Praise as Smart Comedy at Brilliant Premiere

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

The most re[illegible]able of all Theater Guild personalities—Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne [illegible] evening gave the Plymouth's subscription list season a brilliant inaugural. The play was Robert E. Sherwood's captivating comedy, "Reunion in Vienna," which makes sport of post war [illegible] in royal circles. Not even Molnar, who knows his Viennese constituents, and who many times has regaled playgoers on both sides of the great salten Atlantic, could have [illegible] in a better job. To Mr. Lunt and Miss Fontanne, "Reunion in Vienna" was custom made, the kind of entertainment [illegible] for a no faltering note.

This Theater Guild premiere had other aspects than those strictly concerned with the mak[illegible] of [illegible] entertainment. Society had a hand in the proceedings and packed [illegible] to [illegible] more [illegible] garnered [illegible]. On [illegible] could have drawn such an audience although it would be fairer, perhaps, to [illegible] the services of Mr. Lunt and Miss Fontanne in the celebration. In any event the fame of [illegible] ing pair, and the [illegible] of the play gained during its extended [illegible] son may be set down as being a good deal [illegible] nings [illegible] never, [illegible] stage [illegible] flawlessly acted.

In all the seasons of their perennial visits, Mr. Lunt and Miss Fontanne have never more brilliantly exhibited their talents; nor has the Theater Guild, which has a quaint way of occasionally picking bad plays, shown itself in better form. The comedy, of course, reflects the skill of the author in setting up in intriguing fashion the troubles of a discarded royalty. There is honest fun in every line of it, irresistible satire in many of them. And there is good drama for the psycho analyst. Amusing characterizations first hold your attention and tickle your ribs. The doddering generals of a lost war, threadbare nobles and fussy old ladies who have seen better days strut in imaginary glory.

Connie Bennett to Film 'Always Wrong' Before Her European Jaunt

By HARRIET PARSONS

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Sept. 20—Connie Bennett is having difficulty getting away on that much-discussed European jaunt. First retakes on "Rockabye" postponed her departure. And now it's been decided to shoot her next picture before instead of after the trip.

[illegible] "Public Enemy") Glasmon and Charles ("American [illegible]") [illegible] are hard at work on the [illegible] of "Always Wrong," the Adela Rogers St. Johns original which Connie will make immediately [illegible] known for his magazine [illegible] from New York [illegible] on the "Rockabye" repair work, will direct "Always Wrong." And there's more than a chance that Joel McCrea will be Bennett's big moment. Joel and Connie were together in "Born to Love" and "Common Law," and Radio thinks it's a good combination.

Coming to Screen

"Little Women," best loved and most widely read of the Louisa M. Alcott children's series, will have its cinema debut ere long. Radio has purchased the famous book and story. Editor Kenneth MacGowan will be associate producer on the film. Casting "Little Women" is going to be a delicate task. Thousands of us know the tale by heart and each of us has his own conception of Jo, Meg and the other familiar characters. It's going to take a casting Solomon to suit us all! So far Anita Louise is the only player who's been mentioned as a possibility.

Chaplin Undecided

Charlie Chaplin is in a quandary. He can't decide whether to produce another of his own feature comedies, make a picture with an all star cast or shove off for Europe again. Meanwhile three major companies are bidding for "Woman of Paris," only film which the grey headed genius ever produced without himself in the cast. "Woman of Paris" practically eliminated subtitles and introduced a new sophistication to the movies. M-G-M want to talkieize it with Garbo, Paramount wants it for Dietrich, and Sam Goldwyn is also interested. All of whom have given Charlie a yen to do some more producing himself.

Random Re-Marx

Three fourths of the Marx quartette were at the Bebe Daniels-Ben Lyon manse Sunday night. Only Groucho was missing. Harpo dropped in tieless and in house slippers and suddenly removed his shirt. Incidentally the bachelor Marx is having a heck of a time finding a medium sized house with swimming pool and tennis court. If he doesn't find one soon he'll probably go mad (madder?) and run away from a blonde—which would be news. Groucho went to see "Horse Feathers" for the [illegible] time the other night and laughed louder than anyone in the audience at his own "American Tragedy" gag. Swore he'd never heard it before.

Marriage Is Hard on Nerves---So Says Psychologist of Clark University

ONE MORE epoch-making discovery of science—
Marriage—science announces—is hard on the nerves!
This astounding report comes from Raymond Royce Willoughby
Who is a psychologist at Clark University
And an investigator of the nerves of married couples.
He finds [illegible]
In his study of [illegible]
He discovered [illegible] and wives
Suffering from a [illegible]
[illegible]
And he and the new [illegible] thought that was [illegible]
What every wife wonders
Is whether Dr. Willoughby [illegible] a married man
Surely nobody but a bachelor could be so naive
As to get all hot and bothered over the revelation
That marriage is nervous business!
Probably the only thing that can be as hard on the nerves of a husband
Is a wife.

FILLING HIS GLASS

The most happy [illegible] knows moments
When her husband makes her so nervous she could scream
Just as she makes him so nervous he could swear!
There is his trick of refilling his own glass
Before giving his guests their dividends—
His preference for risking a wrong turn
Rather than stopping to ask questions of the cop
His way of leaving the evening papers
Folded inside out and upside down—
His gift for telling the wrong story
When Auntie is around
His habit of taking [illegible]
As a personal affront for which his wife is responsible
His refusal, when [illegible] to do anything about Except glower and gloom and growl
His helplessness in the hands of a salesman
Who can make him buy what he doesn't want
For more than he can afford to pay
His positive genius for Leaving
Things Around
Such are the nerve-racking details of married life
From a woman's point of view.
As for a married man
What gets on his nerves is plenty!
Night after night at dinner
He must hear of all that has gone wrong
In the kitchen and the parlor.

HUNGRY MALE

Eating like a normally hungry male,
He must watch a dieting wife
Do a rabbit's nibble at lettuce and celery.
He must give a good-night kiss
To a face greasy with cold cream.
Whenever the [illegible]

About [illegible]

Since a wife [illegible]

Man Waited Two Years for Love

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

No weakling am I but a man 32 years old. I began going to a certain church near the apartment where I live because the organ was [illegible] splendid. Then I got interested in the services. Then I got interested in the One Girl for me. No, I won't [illegible] but she's worth [illegible] a very devout and so am I at her shrine. This watchful waiting has been going on for two years. I always wait in the [illegible] or outside for her to come. She doesn't exactly smile, but looks at me with kindly interest and sometimes we exchange glances during the service. I know her name. I gave the sexton a dollar to tell me. That was a dollar well spent. [illegible] MAN

Daily True Story

The Way of Love

IT ALL HAPPENED so suddenly. Francis Neide, the young district attorney, having worked late at his office, came out onto the darkened street and hailed a cab. One came almost before he called. As he stepped inside he instantly felt a dull pain in the back of his head, and then oblivion.

[illegible] he found himself on the floor of the cab. He [illegible] how long he had been [illegible] he was being taken. He was blindfolded and gagged [illegible] the cab stopped.

[illegible]

"Don't turn around or we'll plug you," he was warned. Neide stared ahead. "What can you want of me?" he asked. "I have no money. I'm just a poor and unknown district attorney. It won't do any good to hold me for ransom. There is only my sister and myself. We have no money."

"Not so unknown, but you could send Carl Hankins to the chair," a girl's voice shrilled behind him.

"You shut up," growled one of the abductors. The girl was silent.

"If you are going to torture or kill me, do it and get it over." Although he was outwardly calm, wild terror clutched at his heart. He knew his sister would be frantic worrying about him.

"You will never leave here alive," the girl informed him.

"If you are going to kill me," said Francis, "or the rest of your gang here, do it. I appreciate speed."

"Carl Hankins had to sit and wait and think about his death before he paid the penalty." Her eyes flashed hate.

"Then you are Bessie Stevens, the girl who tried so hard to save Hankins from the chair. You must hate me."

"I do."

"You believed he was innocent in spite of the evidence. You loved him or thought you did. You fought for him in spite of the wicked crime he committed. Murdering that woman who was a mother to him for the gold he would receive. You left a good family and home. Your love for him was beautiful," finished Neide, "I felt sorry for you."

SAVINGS LOST

"Before you are killed you are going to admit that a hired man and not Carl killed that woman. He couldn't have done that."

"That was his story, but he admitted he lied."

"Your third degree made him admit it."

His confession was voluntary. [illegible] he [illegible] to the jail of[illegible] for [illegible] he planned to marry you for [illegible] social position.

He would have found means to cast you off later. What happened to other girls' savings that Hankins had invested. They were lost and were never heard of again."

She broke down and cried. "It's all lies, not a word of truth."

"You'll watch me die," said Neide, "that should satisfy you."

"I intend to make you suffer as he did."

"But my sister, why should she suffer for what I have done. She never harmed anyone."

The girl, without replying, hurried from the room.

[illegible] endlessly. The [illegible] him. [illegible] unbound him long [illegible] and then retired [illegible]

[illegible] a captive, he noticed how pale and wan she looked.

OPENED THE DOOR.

"I have been to see your sister and had a long talk. Oh, I can't bear to go through with this [illegible] I have learned [illegible] her voice [illegible] watched her [illegible] were red from [illegible] began to fumble at his bonds. A moment later [illegible] free.

"Follow me," she said. They opened the door slowly. Nobody was near. The gang was in another part of the house. Down a flight of steps they went and out a side door to the girl's roadster, which was parked near.

"Take my car and escape," said Bessie. "Hurry."

"I won't go without you," returned Neide. "Come."

[illegible] was no time to argue [illegible]

[illegible] Attorney [illegible] were asking [illegible]

"I see," said Neide, the first to talk, "that your gang has been apprehended."

"Not my gang," replied Bessie, "anyhow I'm glad I didn't go through with my part after I discovered I loved you well—"

Woman Should Be First to Speak

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When passing a young man on the street, should the lady speak first [illegible] for [illegible] to speak? READER.

It is the time-honored privilege for the lady to make [illegible] acknowledgment of acquaintanceship with a gentleman. And he should wait for this acknowledgment before he bows or speaks.

Wedding Attire

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have often admired the friendly fashion in which you have solved other people's problems, and now I am wondering if you will help me, too?

1. Here is the problem. At a morning church wedding when the groom and the best man have not morning suits, is the blue serge business suit the next best or may dinner jackets be worn?

2. What type of gloves are required? M.

Thank you for your kind words about my column.

1. The "next best" suit to the morning clothes of the formal wedding is the informal blue serge business suit. Dinner jackets should never be worn in the hours of day-time. They are informal evening wear.

2. If the man wears a business suit he would not wear gloves in the church.

The Mourning Veil

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it permissible for a widow to omit the mourning veil when funeral services are just conducted at the home? F.

Yes.

In a Restaurant

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it correct to put your chair back in place when leaving the table, especially in restaurants or cafes? F.

This readjustment of the chair is not necessary.

Banish Frowns to Preserve Beauty

NO NEED to [illegible] comes. Keep the corners of the [illegible] for expression [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] are of a [illegible] own making. She [illegible] At the first sign of [illegible] make it a daily habit [illegible] the complexion with [illegible] lotion that is heavy enough to keep the fingers from slipping and sliding.

Limber Up

STIFF JOINTS are death to graceful movement. So is the rigid backbone that hasn't been [illegible] so that its numerous little pads and cushions have remained flexible. When a woman finds that she has to unfold herself when she rises from a chair it's high time for her to take up rhythmic dancing, join a gym class or force herself to take a three-mile walk each day. It was meant that the body should have plenty of work, sufficient exercise to retain fiber resiliency and the nice steppiness of youth.

Don't Weed Eyebrows

WHY DON'T the little dollies [illegible] that the thin, almost naked eyebrow is a beauty back number? No need of tolerating wild hairs that are on the outskirts of the eyebrow proper, but to weed the growth down to a line that resembles a shred of darning cotton gives the face a vapid appearance, lacking in color contrast and expression.

Keep Teeth Clean

BACTERIA that produce decay of the teeth likes best to gather close to the gums. So see that the bristles of the toothbrush clean the sides as well as inner and outer surfaces of teeth. Use dental floss once a day.

Red and Gray Costume

A REAL BEAUTIFIER is to be found in a cheerful autumn outfit of youthful mien. Such a [illegible] is one that has a gray [illegible] skirt and a jacket of [illegible] made with a gray [illegible] and matching muff. The [illegible] and the costume is shown with a matching red suede hat with a gray-stitched brim.

New Lingerie

ALMOST A TWIN in cut and style to the evening silhouette is the new lingerie, particularly slips and nightgowns. A charming new nightgown of blue French crepe is cut on absolutely Empire lines, with the brief bodice, high waist and long, full skirt. There is a curving, bolero-like suggestion on the bodice worked out in appliques of ecru Alencon.

Quick Way to Clean Rugs

TO REMOVE grease or mud spots from rugs, rub cornstarch into the nap and leave for two days, then brush out.

Crisp Salad

WHEN MAKING salads an upturned saucer placed in the bottom of the bowl will prove a receptacle for any moisture which may come from the ingredients, thus ensuring that the last portion of the salad will be crisp.

True Fish Story

WHETHER your fish comes from your own brook or is bought at the corner market on your mate's way home from the fishing trip, it will taste better, cook easier and have a beautiful golden color if you cook it in a cooking oil made from corn. Besides, the frying will be smokeless procedure because of the high point of this wholesome oil.

HER MOTHER TOLD HER

EVERY month it was the same story. Headaches and backaches. Jumpy nerves. Always tired out by mid-day.

She hated to talk about her trouble. She tried to hide it. But you can't hide things like that from a mother. So her mother told her—what every mother should tell her daughter.

NOW SCIENCE TELLS WHY BRAN IS SO GOOD FOR HEALTH

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Has "Bulk" and Vitamin B; Also Healthful Iron

By using Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, millions of people have overcome common constipation, and the headaches, loss of appetite and energy that so frequently result.

New laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN supplies two things needed to overcome temporary and recurring constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines. Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently it clears the intestines of wastes.

Further experiments prove ALL-BRAN provides twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

Eat this delicious cereal and avoid pills and drugs. They cause artificial action, and often lead to harmful habits.

Try two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily — sufficient to overcome most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

ALL-BRAN has a delicious, nut-sweet flavor. Enjoy as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in making fluffy bran muffins, breads, omelets, etc. Recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

"MARY FAITH" :- - How a Fascinating Heroine Met Old Problems in a New Way---By the Author of "The Flapper Wife," Etc. -:- By BEATRICE BURTON

EVERY MORNING Mary Faith went downstairs as soon as it was light and made the coffee. She made it as she had learned to make it at the Business Woman's Club cooking classes with hot, foamy milk and carried it upstairs on a tray. She and Kim would sit up in bed in their bathrobes and drink it, telling each other with great contentment that this was the life!

It was indeed the life. There were [illegible] to bother them, no ringing of the telephone, no necessity of getting to the office at 9 o'clock every morning or of getting anywhere at any time. They were in a hushed snowy world of their own where they could do exactly as they pleased. It was wonderful.

"We're like Robinson Crusoe and his man Friday on their desert island," Mary Faith said one morning. She was on her knees raking out the ashes from the fireplace in their big sunny bedroom.

"You work all the time as if you thought you were man Friday," Kim answered her. "I ought to be ashamed to lie here in bed and let you build that fire."

Christmas Idyl

Propped against [illegible] of [illegible] the day [illegible] her [illegible]

When [illegible] Mary Faith [illegible] because [illegible] They always ate at before the fireplace in Aunt [illegible] Battenberg [illegible]

They went to church on [illegible] and sat in Aunt [illegible] [illegible] with two [illegible] [illegible]

Wedding Ring

"You embarrass me with your gift—I forgot to get one for you," he said when she gave them to him. "And that reminds me—I haven't bought you your wedding ring yet, have I?"

"No. And I would really like one, Kim. Just a plain white gold band. We'll walk into town one of these mornings and get one, won't we?"

"Sure, we'll do it tomorrow without fail," he promised.

But the next [illegible] a blizzard and they stayed in the house and [illegible]

"Our friend Claire Maldon is all wrong about honeymoons, Kim," Mary Faith observed one night as they sat on the big white bearskin rug that lay before the fireplace in the parlor, listening to the dance music that came pouring into the room from the Wheelers' radio. "We've been married for almost two weeks and I haven't been bored for a single second, have you?"

"You haven't seen me yawn, have you?" Kim's eyes twinkled. "Claire said we'd be so bored after the first week that we'd yawn every time we looked at each other. Remember?"

[illegible] would have [illegible] order for Aunt Ella and on Sunday they would have to [illegible] go back to town.

"The thought of packing up and leaving gives me the blues, as a matter of fact," Kim said, stretching his long legs out toward the fire. "I could stay right here with you until next summer and like it. I've never been so contented in my life as I've been the last couple of weeks."

Loved Taking Care of Him

Mary Faith knew that she had made him happy and contented [illegible] had worked at it. She had [illegible] She had [illegible] his socks and pressed his [illegible]

Every morning she had filled his tub and laid clean towels out for his bath. On Monday she had gone down into the basement, while he was taking a nap, and laundered his shirts . . . And she had loved doing it. She loved taking care of him.

"I've had the time of my life, Kim," she said, "and I'm still having it. It's heaven to be here together, isn't it? Listen, there's the Morrow Hotel Orchestra. They're playing our song."

With their eyes on the fire they sat listening to a blues song on the radio.

All last summer they had danced to that music—the song hit of the year. They had fallen in love with its melody and had asked orchestra leaders to play it for them. They had called it their song.

Kim got up. "Let's see if we've forgotten how to dance together, Mary Faith."

They hadn't.

They moved across the little room like one swiftly moving figure, crooning [illegible] wistful words of the song as they danced.

Long afterward whenever Mary Faith heard it she would remember the smell of pine logs in the fireplace, the sound of the wind rattling the shutters of the little [illegible] the comfort of Kim's arms around her, the warmth of his hand on her waist.

Mary Is Depressed

She would remember how light hearted they had been that night.

They came back to town at dusk on Sunday. The grayness and the [illegible] the misted street lamps and the [illegible] packed with tired-looking [illegible] pressed Mary Faith. She remembered suddenly that Kim's mother would have to be faced in a few minutes, and that Kim would be gone all day tomorrow.

A line of Robert Browning's popped into her head. "So we lose our Eden—Kim and I," she said to herself, leaning back in the crook of his arm as the roadster nosed its way through the crowded downtown streets.

"Well, here we are back to the old everyday existence," Kim said, as if he read her thoughts. "Only it won't be dull and everyday for us now, will it?"

The windows of the flat were in darkness when they drove up in front of the apartment house on W[illegible]on Street.

"Looks as if the sisters Kimberley have gone to church, doesn't it?" Kim asked, switching on the lights in the living room as they came in. His mother and his aunt had been the Misses Kimberley when they were young.

"Hello! Anybody at home?" he called, and almost at once Aunt Ella answered him from the rear of the flat.

"Kimberly, is that you?"

She came trotting into the room, her finger on her lips.

"Let me talk to you," she whispered and waved them back into the hallway.

"Your mother's sick in bed with a little cold," she said to Kim softly. "She's been all upset about you for two weeks, and I think she's just worked hereself up into sickness. You know how high-strung she is . . . So I thought maybe you'd better go in alone and speak to her, Kimberley."

Mother's Reception

"No, we'll both go in to see her," Kim answered firmly. "Come along, Mary Faith."

Aunt Ella padded along behind them.

Mrs. Farrell was sitting up in bed, eating milk toast from a large soup plate. She had on a pink wool hug-me-tight. Her cheeks were pink and Mary Faith thought she had never seen her looking so well.

Kim sat down on the edge of the bed.

"Well, Mother, I'm sorry to find you sick like this." He reached for her hand but she drew it away.

You can lose pounds, Gloriette, but you cannot lose the SHAPE of yourself. Nature and heredity pushed you forth onto the highway in a certain semblance, and you keep that pretty much all through your life—over stones and between roses—whether you eat cake or leave it—whether you weigh much or little. Gloriette, you put out a foot and leg that is plainly chubby, round, short, and inclined to be thick. Never in this life can you acquire in any gym or on any diet the long narrow, bony hard leg of Susanne and the long, narrow low-arched foot that goes with it. When you lose fat, fair one, you will not grow longer!

Jill of the extremely slim legs without muscle and inclined to sway in at the knees will never have Ann Pennington's snug round little members, no matter how much "roundness" she puts on; the fat will go every elsewhere but in the calf where she wants it.

"Aunt Julia! Everybody down south wears lovely things. These aren't the least bit extreme, really!"

FUSSY AUNT JULIA

"Hmm—plush horse! That's what I'd say. Hmm . . . fill your head full of grand ideas! Don't you forget that I dressed you for 20 years . . . well, say 18, without much help, and you never wanted for a thing——"

Val knew. Aunt Julia was jealous.

Aunt Julia seemed older now. Her skin was taut over her high cheek bones, her mouth was set in a stiff line. She was fussier than she had ever been. Constantly complaining, criticising.

But she baked a marvelous three-layer cake for Val's twenty first birthday. Beat and creamed and whipped and worked until it came out feather-light and velvet-gold under the layer of Val's favorite thick pineapple icing.

Val's heart was touched. She knew Aunt Julia wasn't very well, and here she had gone to all this trouble and cooked chicken Maryland and made hot baking powder biscuits, too. And she had forgotten that it was her birthday and Aunt Julia would make a fuss over it, and came home a train late, letting the chicken dry on the stove.

She wasn't hungry either, having had a soda at the ferry with one of the girls from the office, but she ate everything on her plate, nearly choking over the last few bites but determined to eat everything if it killed her.

The pink crepe slip which Aunt Julia had made for her for a birthday present seemed painfully substantial and prosaic beside the fairy-like daintiness of the things Millie had given her, and somehow it made her want to cry, out of a queer pity for Aunt Julia, who watched jealously, almost suspiciously, while she opened the package and exclaimed over it.

Then Aunt Julia brought out two other packages that had arrived by mail.

One was an immense, tissue-stuffed box [illegible] a short, white ermine evening wrap, from Millie and Vincent.

It looked so exotic, so out of place, when she laid it on one of the golden oak chairs in the dining room.

Aunt Julia picked it up. "Hmm . . . they're getting that rabbit to look about like the real thing, except they can't get the tails on it!" she said, turning the delicate thing in her hands. Val didn't tell her that it WAS the real thing, and Aunt Julia went on:

"I remember my friend, Miss Vollmer, had an evening wrap stole, with 28 tails on it, when she went to Europe. I thought some of going with her at the time, but you came along just then, and, well . . . I'm glad I didn't go . . . Aren't you going to open that other package?"

It was from Joe. Val had [illegible] she could take it to her [illegible] first present from Joe.

She wanted it all to herself. And maybe it would be some[illegible] would seem little [illegible] the magnificence of Millie [illegible] Aunt Julia would [illegible] mean.

"Open it up!"

So Val had to open it.

JOE'S PRESENT

The large, outer package was [illegible] in heavy brown paper [illegible] twine sealed with real [illegible] It was had a smaller one within, a very small one, wrapped in the [illegible] paper, fastened with the [illegible] [illegible]

"I hope he didn't go and spend a lot of money!" Her fingers were shaking. If only she [illegible] have opened it alone without Aunt Julia leaning over, breathing on her neck.

"Open it up! Land sakes, you're slow!"

The little pale box [illegible]

It was a ring. A ring [illegible] diamond, in a delicate [illegible] of [illegible] inum leaves. An engagement ring.

Aunt Julia said [illegible] Reached with her [illegible] work roughened hand took the ring from Val's fingers.

"Very pretty," she said.

After a long [illegible] she asked: "When are you going to get married?"

"I don't know," Val [illegible]

She was tingling from [illegible] foot. A ring [illegible] from Joe.

Val hadn't intended to wear her ring. Since their engagement was a secret, it might be better not to wear it. But when you have a ring, it's funny not to wear it [illegible] gracious.

She put it on, decided [illegible] for a little while, at home. Take it off tomorrow, when she went to the office. It would be [illegible] with Joe's ring on her finger and her hand tucked under her [illegible]

In the morning she couldn't bear to take it off. She [illegible] her glove and [illegible] it seemed a shame [illegible] her purse.

She told a few of the [illegible] tell! It's a secret.

But of course it was too good to keep.

"Valentine Macfarlane's engaged . . . to a fellow she used to know, ages ago, and he's given her the loveliest ring. Ask her to show it to you!"

It was just chance that Janice Fletcher's brother, who worked for Mrs. Clarkson's husband, who had a garage, happened to say that Miss Macfarlane, who lived next door to the Clarksons, was engaged. He heard. Mr. Clarkson, like any good husband, brought home the latest neighborhood gossip.

Mrs. Clarkson was surprised. Valentine never seemed to have any beaux. Went everywhere with her aunt. [illegible] she [illegible]

[illegible]

"Humph—Mrs. Clarkson!"

Mrs. Macfarlane smiled [illegible] back to her wi[illegible]

Mrs. Clarkson balked of her orig[illegible] home when [illegible] blonde head [illegible]

"Yoo, hoo, ain't it hot!" [illegible] Mrs. Carey.

"Goin' to be a scorcher," said Mrs. Clarkson.

"I thought I'd do up the work and take the kids over to the beach. I don't swim myself but it's wonderful how they take to it. I thought I'd put on my pajamas and kinda take a sunbath myself. Why don't you come, too?"

"HAVE YOU HEARD"

Mrs. Carey [illegible] the street [illegible] Careys' palm tree. "No, I'm goin' to meet my sister-in-law and we're goin' to a bridge tea at the Hotel Oakland," she said. "Her lodge is having it. Say, have you heard about Valentine Macfarlane?"

Mrs. Carey's eyes fla[illegible] "What do you mean? I haven't heard anything. Is she going back to her mother?"

"No, she's engaged. Engaged to be married. What are you looking funny at, Mrs. Carey? She's a young pretty girl—"

"Yes. But I haven't seen no signs of her gettin' engaged. I don't see no boys beating down the door over there. Just her and her old aunt, goin' to the movies, the same as usual. I don't believe it myself. Where did you hear it?"

"Oh, it's true. Herman told me. His helper, Ted Fletcher told him. His sister works in Val's office. He says his sister says she has a beautiful ring."

STRANGE VISIT

"Probably her mother gave it to her. I hear she's married to some oil magnate, or movin' picture director, in Hollywood. That's just like Val! She'd say it was an engagement ring. She's been itchin' to get married ever since Betty did.

"She always was a liar, that kid. When they was all little I hated to have mine play with her, that's a fact . . . George, you quit teasing your little sister! Do you hear me? Those young ones! I'm getting so I hate Saturdays, havin' 'em all home.

Will We Get Our Money Back?

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Senator Brookhart is just suspecting there have been stock abuses in Wall Street.

Where has the senator been all this time? In the upper berth over Rip Van Winkle.

Our own suspicions have been ripening on the vine for three years. There was something fishy about that market and it wasn't trout.

We don't accuse those droll little margineers of anything. Like the man in the dental chair, we arrived of our own volition. The dentist didn't send for us.

It is better to have plunged and bounced than never to have bounced at all. If Senator Brookhart insists on his postponed autopsy why, of course, the writer willingly gives the body of his broker to science.

But, the grass has grown over the battlefield, Senator. And, like Lee, Bismarck, Grant and Wellington, the best we can hope for is to be paid off in monuments.

MARKETS BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN BUSINESS
A HOME PAPER FOR PEOPLE WHO THINK

PEOPLE BEGINNING TO SPEND MORE FREELY

By B. C. FORBES

One thing certain is: When more money begins to be made more money will begin to be spent.

The executives of one nationwide company send this column the extremely interesting and revealing results of an investigation among its employes concerning what they made up their minds to buy as soon as they are satisfied that better conditions have come to stay.

Something of a boom in certain important lines of business is foreshadowed.

Rigid Economy Irksome

Have you noticed among your own friends lately, revived talk about [illegible] that and the next thing they are eager to buy?

Not so very long ago conversation most commonly referred to economies, to economies already achieved and to others contemplated. The keynote was caution, retrenchment, rigid conservation of resources. Most people were downcast, looked down and were cutting down.

Hope is being reborn in many quarters. Aspiration is displacing [illegible] is giving way to [illegible] and talk of satisfying them. It is not natural for Americans to be niggardly. They have not been acting naturally and are becoming tired of their long-continued, irksome [illegible].

[illegible] the recovery has been outside of security markets, some increase in buying by the public has already manifested itself.

40 Billion to Be Spent

What of the outlook?

G. E. Cullinan, vice president of Graybar, which "has 73 distributing houses covering most of the states and employing all sorts of wage-earners—truck drivers, office boys, clerks, stenographers, secretaries, salesmen, managers, top-line executives" sent a letter to each employe asking him or her to send in a list of "things my family and I need now and would buy if I could be assured that business and economic conditions would no longer decline, but, rather, steadily improve, and that improvement would be reflected in my income."

The survey indicates that 1110 employes plan to buy:

	Units	Value	Approx. Unit Value
New Homes	172	$1,021,500	$6,000
Automobiles	367	285,885	780
Refrigerators	491	85,211	175
Heating Equip	83	21,760	262
Wash. Machines	277	20,966	75
Radios	206	14,067	70
Ironing Mach	155	13,192	85

Based on 1.5 people gainfully employed per family in this income group, the total deferred demand in the United States which will be purchased probably within the next two or three years as business conditions improve follows:

New homes, $3,096,000; automobiles, $6,606,000; refrigerators $8,838,000; heating equipment, $1,494,000; Washing machines $4,986,000; radios, $3,708,000; ironing machines, $2,900,000.

The conclusion reached is that there is forty billion dollars "latent" consumer buying power in the United States at this moment.

Money Going for Necessities

That's a lot of business. America's retail merchants sold 50 billion dollars' worth in 1929, the census of distribution shows. By 1931 the total had dwindled to about 37 billions, while this year sales "will probably be about 30 billion dollars," L. D. H. Weld, director of research for McCann-Erickson, estimates.

Consumer demand, he points out, has been shifting during the last 20 years. Up to 1929 there was a market increase in sales of such luxury goods as jewelry, silverware, furs. Expenditures for automobiles increased enormously.

Of late people have been confining their purchases rather rigidly to necessities.

Record Business for Retailers

Saturday was probably the busiest day New York stores have enjoyed this year. By closing time goods in various departments of various stores were extraordinarily meager.

High finance may be worrying over political prospects, but [illegible] the people have begun buying at least a little more freely.

Hears:

That a few more sessions designed to encourage bear activities are to be expected. A good many in the district are convinced that the downside is now the place to seek profits. Further sagging of prominent preferred shares, together with bearish advices on the grains, is likely to be the nourishment offered short sellers. While it may be wrong to be too skeptical, the blatant advertising of weakness is so inviting that discretion seems in order.

One Obstacle

These [illegible] constructive [illegible] faced with one obstacle at the moment. It is the status of the various pools which came into being towards the end of the recent upward movement. Not all of them have been able to [illegible] their stock and it is [illegible] on margin.

Now if the managers of these various groups suddenly decide that the original sponsors of the rise have withdrawn for good, it is likely that a flood of offerings will deluge the stock market places. Such a happening could easily spoil any bull plans now in progress of construction.

There is no doubt that the principal powers behind the market are aware of this situation. If they intend to carry on bullish attempts they will see that nothing happens to upset the [illegible] groups. For this reason the [illegible] points and volume [illegible] noted here yesterday are very important.

This and That

[illegible] of course on the development of the bull picture in the next session or so a new pool is expected to make an appearance in United Aircraft. The objective the new crowd has in mind is a good bit higher than the recent [illegible] the power to accomplish [illegible] market conditions.

Du Pont Business Improvement Stays

August business of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. showed marked improvement over earlier months and the improvement was continued in early September, according to President Lammot du Pont.

American Tobacco Sales Are Better

Under stimulus of the company's latest advertising campaign, sales of Lucky Strike cigarettes by American Tobacco Co. so far this month have increased substantially from August. [illegible] improvement for [illegible] Nevertheless American Tobacco has shown a smaller [illegible] decline in cigarette sales so far this year than the drop in [illegible] cigarette consumption in the United States the first seven months of 1932 as compared with the like 1931 period.

Short Selling Still Watched

Comment on the Stock Exchange order revising the procedure of reporting short positions stressed the fear that traders may place exaggerated importance on the ruling. [illegible] was strongly emphasized [illegible] the change the Exchange was not relaxing its attitude on the restrictions against [illegible] The step was interpreted as simply relieving member firms of certain clerical work which could be devoted to [illegible] facilities created by the pressure of increased business.

Trader Is Given More Time

[illegible] by asking data on positions once a week instead of daily and discontinuing reports of the [illegible] actions the Exchange gives the bear trader ample opportunity to carry his commitment over a longer period without the transaction appearing in the record.

Canadian Railways Report Awaited

Report on the Canadian Royal Commission on Railways is expected to be made public within the next 48 hours.

Market Entering Stalemate Status

Confusing price movement and diminished volume in the share list in more recent sessions has served to prepare many traders for a stalemated market condition for an indefinite period according to opinions. Little surprise would be felt if irregularity and dull periods extend over the next fortnight unless of course some unforeseen news appears. This, it is argued, is the most desirable prerequisite to the restoration of stability.

New Optimism in the Toaster

The newer optimism being sounded from directions hitherto scarcely recognized as business indices brought the electric toasting industry in with its contribution to a return of prosperity. According to a news release, "A bright spot of significance came to light in the business horizon today with the announcement that [illegible] is sufficiently convinced that the business upturn is definite and as a result it will bring out October 1 a newly invented automatic electric toaster which it will market throughout the country."

Pools Abandon Market Operations

Current market uncertainty has caused postponement and in cases abandonment of operations by at least a dozen pools in low priced issues.

Street Watching U. S. Steel Action

Action of U. S. Steel common and preferred is again being watched by the speculative element in stock market circles for evidence of banking sentiment toward prices. Because of Steel's close connections with the most influential private financial interests in the street its fluctuations exert great effect on general opinion. Interest at the moment centers on the preferred due to uncertainty as to the outcome of the next dividend meeting. Directors have already gone on record with the statement that the rate will be reduced unless business improves.

Lehman Corp.'s Interest in B.-M. T.

Election of a representative of the Lehman Corporation to the board of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation disclosed that the Lehman enterprise has become one of the largest individual holders of the transit stock. From 750 shares of common owned in June 1931 the investment had been increased to 25,000 shares on June 30, 1932.

United Corp. Common Yield

Part of the difficulty which the bull pool in United Corporation experiences in marking up their favorite may be due to the high yield on the same enterprise's preferred issue. The latter yields 9 per cent while the common's 40-cent dividend at $10 a share for the stock returns a yield of 4 per cent. Surely, the United bulls cannot argue lack of safety in the preferred while boosting their own junior pet.

Reading Starts on Equipment Repairs

Reading company announced the inauguration of an equipment repair program to 3800 cars and 78 locomotives at a cost estimated at approximately $1,250,000.

Work has been started in the locomotive and car shops at Reading and in the car shops at St. Clair where [illegible] repairs will be made to 800 cars.

Dividends

National Rockland Bank declared regular quarterly dividend of 80 cents a share, payable October 1 to stock of record September 20.

Directors of the Virginian railway announced today that they had decided to "defer consideration" of the quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share on the common stock.

—SPECTATOR—

Says:

While the belief that a substantial base for the start of another rally is in the making, prevailing opinion is that over the next few sessions the best that can be expected is intermittent rallies in a creeping downtrend.

Tempered Optimism

Just how far the market may creep on the downside is more than Wall Street statisticians care to commit themselves. Any optimism the street may have at the present time is being tempered with thoughts as to what the next Iron Age report may bring.

A bad report on the steel industry could easily be reflected in a decidedly sharp selloff in the market and the breaking of 60 level which is the traditional support level for the market. Should this happen there is no telling where the market might go.

Wheat Market

The commodities still hold the key to the market's future. What the wheat market needs more than anything else is the report that the export business has picked up.

The one thing in favor of the market currently is that the declines in the list have not been of proportions to weaken any great number of accounts, particularly the larger ones which if liquidated could cause real trouble.

Business Gain Is Noted by Holman

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Definite signs of improvement in business conditions were noted in report made by Henry H. Heiman, executive manager of National Association of Credit Men at the [illegible] conference of secretary-managers of association. Commodity price increases were taken as most favorable sign noted in report. Demand that $1,000,000,000 be lopped from national budget and that local governments expenditures be cut 20 per cent also was contained in report.

MODERATE RISE IS REGISTERED IN WALL ST.

New York, Sept. 20—Important shares registered a moderate rise in trading on the New York Stock Exchange today after some early irregularity. The trading pace was slow.

U. S. Steel sold off to a new low on the setback movement, then registered slow recovery, and in the afternoon was turned over mostly at fractional net advances.

STEEL PRESSURE LIFTS

With U. S. Steel preferred off more than 20 points from its high on the summer recovery, pressure lifted and the issue was traded in the afternoon at better than a 2-point net advance.

Shares up 2 or more points at the same time included J. I. Case, Lackawanna, American Can, Motor Products and Atchison. Railroads continued to show the best group tone, still under influence of Gov. Roosevelt's constructive Salt Lake City speech.

Gains of a point or better simultaneously appeared for Standard Oil of N. J., Union Pacific, Union Carbide, United Aircraft, Lambert, Foster Wheeler, Consolidated Gas, Corn Products, American Tobacco B, American Telephone, Air Reduction, Allied Chemical and others.

The bond market moved about uncertainly, with traders and investors generally hesitant in the matter of taking on sizeable commitments.

Strength of the United States Government Department brought a dodicum of cheer to the rather indifferent session. New highs for the year were again recorded by Liberty First 4¼s, Treasury 3⅜s, 4s and 4¼s.

At its closing level yesterday, the stock average had duplicated the low point touched on last week's reaction and approximately 40 per cent of the market's extreme gain, established in the late summer, had been erased.

This was not considered surprising in view of the sharpness of the recent upturn, and some brokers thought the market still had potential power provided it did not run into unfavorable business statistics during the next week or so.

STEEL TRADE HOPEFUL.

The steel trade appeared somewhat more optimistic, Pittsburgh reporting a slight gain in activity this week. August automobile production figures, when revised to give effect to seasonal influences, registered a small gain over July.

The Department of Labor's wholesale price index showed a gain for August, and some saw a moderately hopeful augury in relation to new railroad buying of steel products because of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans to Pennsylvania and other carriers to finance equipment purchases.

The weekly condition statement of reporting Federal Reserve member banks showed increases of $221,000,000 in demand deposits, $107,000,000 in member bank reserves with the federal, and $38,000,000 in investments, but loans declined by $46,000,000.

Freight traffic handled by Missouri Pacific Railway on Friday and Saturday of last week broke all records for this year, L. W. Baldwin, president, states. 1.

Associated Gas Writeup Is Shown

Washington, Sept. 20 (INS)—Disclosures that the Associated Gas and Electric System made $16,849,923.66 by "writing up" the investments of the New York Electric Co. in seven subsidiary companies controlled by the latter were made today at the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of the financial operations of the nation's major power companies.

Examiner Charles Nodder, the witness, said control of the seven companies had cost the New York Electric Co. $17,183,656.52 and the value of investments were "written up" to $34,033,580.52.

Engineering Aid for Small Projects

Washington, Sept. 20 (INS)—In order to speed self-liquidating projects throughout the country, particularly the smaller ones, the American Engineering Council has volunteered the services of 33 of the country's leading consulting engineers to operate in connection with the 33 regional advisory committees of the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

Office Equipment Business Better

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—The office equipment business which has been treading the deep depression path for more than two years, recently has shown signs of improvement.

Reports of the principal equipment makers disclose business in August gained 15 per cent on the average over the preceding month.

Wholesale Price Index Declines

Wholesale prices last week declined to an index of 62.3 per cent of the 1926-28 average from 62.7 per cent in the preceding week according to the National Fertilizer Association. This was the first pronounced recession since prices reached their recent stable position.

Work for 500 Men Planned by Pennsy.

Philadelphia, Sept. 20—The $2,000,000 loan by R. F. C. to Pennsylvania Railroad for purpose of building freight cars is expected by corporation directors to give about 500 men work at Altoona shops for five months.

COTTON MILLS' ACTIVITY UP

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—An upturn in the cotton spinning industry was shown today in the census bureau's monthly activity report recording for August an increase of 50 per cent in the number of spindle hours as compared with July.

The industry was working at 72.4 per cent of capacity, on a single shift basis, as compared with 51.7 per cent July. The latter was the lowest point reached since the beginning of compilation of the reports more than 10 years ago.

There was an increase of 1,436,719, or 47 per cent in spindle hours in the cotton-growing states mills. The increase in activity was larger in the New England states, which showed a gain of 309,587,258 spindle hours or 77 per cent increase.

Conde Nast Calls for Bond Exchange

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Conde Nast Publications, Inc., has requested holders of its three-year sinking fund 6 per cent notes, due on Dec. 15, to exchange them for first mortgage 6½ per cent gold bonds of the corporation and cash. The basis of the exchange is $1000 of bonds and $100 in cash for each $1000 in notes of the company.

Nickel Plate Gets Equity Shift Permit

Interstate Commerce Commission has permitted New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railway to pledge with the Railroad Credit Corporation its equity in $10,500,000 of its refunding mortgage 4½ per cent gold bonds which are now pledged with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as collateral security for loans from the R. F. C.

Insurance Policy Loans Off Sharply

Many signs indicate an improvement in general business conditions, according to a statement made by Thomas A. Buckner, President Life Insurance Company.

One such sign, Mr. Buckner declared, is a decrease in the number of applications for policy loans and a substantial decrease in the aggregate amount of loans applied for.

Consolidated Oil Workers Recalled

Consolidated Oil Corp. announced today that its marketing subsidiary, Sinclair Refining Co., had awarded contracts for approximately 1500 tons of fabricated steel for its refinery improvement program. The company is recalling 150 former employes at Kansas City for construction work and expects to increase this number to 250 or 300.

Fewer Commercial Failures in Week

A further reduction appears in the number of commercial failures in the United States for the week just closed, the fifth in succession, even allowing for the short week. For the first five days of last week, the records of R. G. Dun & Co. show 420 defaults, compared with 549 the preceding week and 589 for the third week back.

Movement to Help Workers Praised

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

New York, Sept. 20—The country has been paying a terrific price during the depression for stupidity entailing a breakdown of management in the large, but already there are surface indications of growing realization by more able business executives of their social responsibilities.

It is perhaps symbolic of this news trend that heads of two great Standard Oil units—Walter Teagle, president, Standard Oil of New Jersey, and K. R. Kingsbury, president, Standard Oil of California, have recently been devoting their talents chiefly to plans for spreading employment.

There is a growing appreciation of the importance in this complicated power age of keeping social groups at work so that they can continue to exchange with one another the products of their hours of labor. In his Topeka, Kan., address, dealing largely with the farm problem, Franklin D. Roosevelt set forth this viewpoint in an enlightened manner.

Along this line, the man who is probably San Francisco's outstanding banker and who is also otherwise one of the first citizens of the city points out in a message to this column:

"While trade barometers hold much of promise for the immediate and long time future, there is, in my opinion, a far more favorable tendency in the growing acceptance of the doctrine that no prosperity can be sustained which does not speed employment to all willing to work; a recognition that the progress in perfecting our industrial machinery must be accompanied by such changes in our social practices as will spread the benefit throughout society.

"Increased tempo in industry will, of course, increase employment, but the point which is being recognized and accepted is that such employment must be spread among all in order to furnish the consumptive capacity necessary to utilize the increased productive capacity of applied science.

"The 'spread the work' movement, therefore, has, in my opinion, a far deeper social significance than the temporary alleviation of acute unemployment, and general acceptance of the principle will, I feel, be about the greatest forward step of our period in preserving and augmenting a social organization which has brought such great advances in material welfare."

Extra Indiana Pipe Line Dividend

Indiana Pipe Line Company declared an extra dividend of five cents and a dividend of 10 cents on the $10 par capital stock, both payable November 15 to stock of record October 21.

Cotton Mill Advances Wages

Richmond, Va., Sept. 20—The Halifax Cotton Mills, beginning at once, has given its employes a wage increase of 10 per cent. This mill has been operating part-time throughout the summer when other businesses were at a standstill.

Caterpillar Tractor in Red

New York, Sept. 20—Caterpillar Tractor Corporation's August net loss was $44,394 after charges. For eight months ended August 31 net loss was $624,214. Net sales for August were $1,088,455 and for the eight months $9,787,212.

Shipbuilding Plans Change

New York Stock Exchange has received notice from American Shipbuilding Company of a proposed reduction in capital represented by outstanding common stock to $40 a share from $60.

Outdoor Advertising Loser

General Outdoor Advertising, Inc., reports for quarter ended June 30, 1932, net loss of $477,307, after taxes, depreciation, interest and amortization, against net loss of $816,089 in the preceding quarter and net loss of $237,594 in June quarter of previous year. Six months net loss was $1,293,396, against net loss of $887,811 in the first half of 1931.

$1,000,000 IN PLANE ORDERS

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—The United Aircraft & Transport Corporation has closed contracts with the Brazilian and Persian governments for the delivery of planes, engines and propellers worth $1,500,000, Frederick B. Rentschler, president of the company, announced today.

The Brazilian order comprises 37 airplanes, including 14 pursuit ships, a quantity of spare parts and special equipment. The Persian order calls for 40 supercharged engines with propellers and spare parts.

Pittsburgh Steel Production Is Up

Pittsburgh, Sept. 20—Steel industry here reports today production slightly higher than last week. The industry had a moderate spurt early in the month. This was followed by a period of moderate hesitation and then by an increased volume of new orders last week which will result in expanded production this week.

National Steel has increased its output to 30 per cent of capacity from 25 per cent. This is much greater than the average for the industry as a whole, which has boosted its output about a point to 16 per cent.

Shoe Upper Leather Prices Are Put Up

Strength and rapidly advancing trend in the hide and skin markets has caused additional firming in leather. The demand for footwear continues to center on cheaper-priced lines and lower selections of sole and upper are, in consequence chiefly active.

Tanners have made successive advances on upper and an additional one cent increase is announced by a big Eastern side upper, patent and calf tanner, effective this week.

Stone & Webster's Bank Loans Paid

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Stone & Webster, Inc., paid off all its own bank loans during the first eight months of this year, while its principal subsidiary, Engineers Public Service Co., reduced its own and subsidiaries' loans by $3,720,000 during the same period, it was announced today. Other Stone & Webster, Inc., subsidiaries cut loans by $600,000, making total reductions of $6,220,000 by the group so far this year.

Banker Acceptance Total Is Lowered

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Bankers acceptances outstanding at the end of August amounted to $681,465,807, a decrease of $23,180,785 from the amount outstanding on July 1, the American Acceptance Council reported today. At the close of August, 1931, they totaled $1,090,399,849, or $408,934,042 more than at the end of last month. The decline during the month brought the volume of acceptances outstanding to a new low since October 31, 1926.

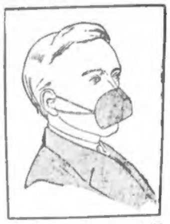
IT WON'T BE LONG NOW



Who can help but sympathize with Will Hays in his efforts to keep the inmates of Hollywood pure in speech as well as in deed? Don't interrupt, p' ase. To right-thinking people, it is deplorable that certain muggs should come to the "Cinema Capital," accept fat salaries, and then announce:

"Nobody has no culture in Hollywood and besides the gin is rancid. I wouldn't be here if it wasn't for back alimony pilin' up. What I need is a BREATH OF FRESH AIR."

Well, Sir, this sort of thing won't go on much longer. If our plans go through, and we think they will, the Doakes A-1, O. K. Interview Filter will be immediately clapped on all new studio workers the moment they get off the train. And then let Mr. Wise Guy make ill-mannered remarks! No matter what he says, through the Doakes Filter it will always sound like:

"Hollywood is lovely. The executives are certainly a mighty fine body of men. I could work on here forever. The only thing that worries me is that it may be nothing but a beautiful dream."

AL SMITH SPEAKS ON AIR

Happy Warrior Voice Coming Over WAAB

By N. F. T.

All America hears former Governor Alfred E. Smith tomorrow evening when he steps to Columbia Broadcasting System microphones in New York. He will be interviewed as an editor by Bill Schudt, the broadcasting gentleman who conducts that weekly program called "Going to Press," featuring foremost journalistic personalities.

UNOFFICIAL UTTERANCES

Just what political significance the remarks of the New York Democracy champion will include, is more or less guarded in the advance announcements having to do with this radio appearance of "Al." However, it seems safe to assume he will air more than a little of his viewpoint concerning the coming presidential battle. New England can catch the interview via WAAB waves between 5:15 and 5:30. In addition to broadcasting, Editor Smith also submits to the television "eye" during the period by means of the CBS sight station W2XAB.

Alfred E. Smith

Revival of the colorful "Showboat" presentation is due over NBC facilities one week from Thursday night, with a galaxy of stage and radio stars taking part. A complete list of celebrities is being compiled at present, while the big show continues, adding to the cast during rehearsals.

TUNEFUL TEAM

Hum and Strum, Boston's popular harmony pair, air some snappy patter and parodies after supper tonight, accompanied as usual by Benny McLaughlin at the piano. They hold forth (WNAC) at 7:30, backed by Sears Roebuck.

New York's Governor Roosevelt, now in Portland, Ore., has another 45 minutes for coast to coast audiences, broadcasting tomorrow night (WAAB) from 11 to 11:45 p. m.

* * *

There's an international program coming across the Atlantic tomorrow afternoon from London. It commemorates the centenary of the birth of Sir Walter Scott. Hear it hereabouts conveyed by WNAC between 4:10 and 4:40 p. m.

* * *

Tonight and tomorrow night "Crime Club" offerings (WNAC) at 9:30 will treat "Bulldog Drummond Returns," an exciting dramatic story that embraces murder, adventure and romance in two half hour episodes.

LOCAL LATHER

Program department heads in Hub sound sanctums have been required to read all of the political speeches we've been hearing, if we've been listening. While these have meant considerable much-needed money to the echo emporiums, checking and double checking all that candidate comment is something the boss men behind microphones will be glad to have conclude . . . Borrah Minevitch, when he was here and acted as mouth organ maestro over his "rascals," aired through WBZ, graciously made John Clark, the studio chief, a present of an elegant harmonica, thus causing the latter to begin taking lessons on the thing . . . Lewis (WEEI) Whitcomb is eager to get an earful of Frank Crumit's new song, "The Grandson of Abdul Abulbul Amir." It's a breezy bit the stage star singer has slated for tonight (8 to 8:30 p. m.) as a novelty . . . Police Superintendent Michael Crowley takes a "mike" turn early tomorrow evening (WNAC) at 5:45, to be interviewed by Francis P. "Tip" O'Neill, night police reporter for your favorite newspaper. Followers of the weekly Saturday night talks by "Tip" have long wanted to hear the headquarters scribe query the genial "super" by radio, therefore some interesting information pertaining to the Boston department and crime conditions may be expected . . . You'll understand why Carl Moore and George Harris are referred to as "Bottle Babies" before their new 15-minute period of songs and chatter has progressed very far (WNAC) beyond 8:30 tonight, which is when it begins.

On the Air

The phrase, "What's in a name?" finally takes on importance. CBS spent a lot of time and money just to learn a chap's middle name . . . On the March of Time p'gram the full names of all the characters must be mentioned, but last wk. Andrew J. Volstead was to be mimiced on that feature and no one knew his middle tag . . . Telegrams, consultations, long distance phone calls—but no one could learn what the 'J' is for . . . So the p'gram took to the air without giving that gentleman's middle name . . Wonder if it's Julep, or Jin.

Kate Smith has been engaged to be starred in a full length talkie, but when Kate saw the script she balked and said she wasn't the type for "heavy love" interest. If she isn't the type for "heavy love" interest then who would be? At any rate Fanny Hurst has been signed to write a special script for her. Maybe they'll also call in Edna Ferber, author of "So Big."

Paul Whiteman claims a certain well-to-do manager of radio artists goes to his downy bed each night thanking his lucky stars . . . Which isn't bad for an orch. leader.

Joe Rines offers up this 'un: "They laughed when I went to the piano but their laughter soon turned to tears when they realized I was from the finance company."

X-RAY

Examination, consultation and trial treatment absolutely free to all who call before Sept. 25th, 1932. The wonderful power of the X-ray and mercury quartz light treatment is accomplishing wonders in disease of every description. No matter what your disease may be, remember Daniel J. Walsh, M. D., fulfills the above offer.

ASTHMA

Mrs. Mary Wilcox, 35 Waverly St., Malden, Mass., says:—"I suffered from Bronchial Asthma for seven years, smothering and coughing. I had a great many different kinds of medicine and treatments but did not get any relief until I read of Dr. Walsh and had him treat me. His treatment has done so much for me that I am glad to make this statement that others who suffer as I did may know where to go for relief."

Garner Tells the Truth

Hoover Delayed Congress Relief Action

Speaker Garner, the Democratic vice-presidential candidate, has pointed out in a recent speech that President Hoover is taking slightly more credit than the facts warrant. He is rather brazenly claiming that he initiated certain relief measures which, as a matter of fact, he openly opposed and for which he scolded Congress only a few months ago.

He vetoed the Wagner employment legislation, fought the Garner measures for financial relief, and largely emasculated them.

He berated Congress for attempting to relieve conditions by extending funds directly to legitimate business instead of pushing them into the pockets of high financiers for special and speculative purposes.

Less personally ambitious American citizens saw months ago that immediate and drastic aid was necessary.

Herbert Hoover opposed all efforts to extend this aid unless it was inspired by the sanctified brains of the Republican politicians.

Politics explains why he is now supporting what he opposed a month ago.

President Hoover in his address Thursday before the welfare and relief mobilization conference stated:

> "I secured to the Red Cross 85,000,000 bushels of wheat, 500,000 bales of cotton, and an authorisation to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to advance $300,000,000 to such States as could not finance themselves to take care of distress."

Speaker Garner reminds the people that their President is not telling the exact truth.

He did not obtain a bushel of wheat nor a bale of cotton for the Red Cross. Congress initiated that legislation. He had nothing to do with the lending of $300,000,000 to the States for relief. Democratic Senator Wagner of New York originated that idea and it was written into the relief bill over the President's opposition.

The President, as Mr. Garner says, vigorously assailed the appropriation of funds for public buildings for unemployment relief.

In his acceptance speech of August 11, the President said:

> "The opposition leadership insisted, as the price of vital reconstruction legislation and over the protests of our leaders, upon adding $300,000,000 of costs to the taxpayers through public works inadvisable at this time."

After months of disgraceful delay, he decides that public buildings are essential.

On August 11 he criticised the "opposition" for insisting upon "adding $300,000,000 as inadvisable."

On Sept. 9, he boasted that he had ordered the Federal departments to speed up the constructive programs.

We can be sure of but one thing: Our President will oppose every relief suggestion that does not arise in his own arrogance, and then when he is forced to action he will claim as his own the very legislation he has condemned.

In this respect he may remind you of an old railroad builder who said that anything that wasn't nailed down belonged to him, and anything he could tear loose wasn't nailed down.

Herbert Hoover will discover that the American people are brighter than he thinks.

If he has any doubt let him wander into a motion picture theater and observe the enthusiastic indifference with which they greet his picture on the screen, and the glad enthusiasm that greets the photographs of Roosevelt and Garner.

This Is Your Day—

This is Primary Day in Massachusetts.

This is one of the only two days in every two years on which the citizen can exercise his fullest right of citizenship, the other being Election Day itself.

The two political parties have numerous candidates who are attractive, who are well equipped to serve in political office and for whom you can vote in confidence without stultifying yourself. They also have several hundred who have no other qualification for public office than a desire to get on the public payroll.

This Primary Day happens to come in a year of the National Elections and you owe it as a duty to yourself as well as to the country to let the people know who run this country that you are interested and concerned in how it is being run.

Vote today. Do not allow anyone in politics to assume you are uninterested and unconcerned. Take a hand in the selection of those you want to serve you and in eliminating those you do not want to serve you the coming two years of importance.

Has It Come to This?

Hitch-hikers are entering politics, according to motorists. Perhaps they do not stop in one place long enough to become very formidable as voters, but as propagandists!

A returned-from-the-Coast tourist stated that he saw two hitch-hikers plodding along the highway with this legend on their knapsacks:

"Give me a ride, or I'll vote for Hoover!"

Crossing the Atlantic

The Cabin Steward

AT SEA, Sept. 20—Nothing is more soothing than awakening aboard ship. A worrisome world melts with the mist. September skies fluff a teasing of May. The sun in gay archness flashes through the porthole like the boreal aurora. A sea pullulates in sultry rhyme, how I go on!

Much success of a voyage depends upon the cabin steward. Ours is an oak-bosomed, squat Frenchy who won us instantly because of a blushing confusion. Coming in with breakfast, he tripped into a comic fall with the tray aloft, everything intact, crying: "Voila!" Chaplin couldn't have improved it.

He is full of "Alors!" I've a feeling I could work my way through France with a Willie Howard shrug and a ready "Alors!" Alors is like our expression "Well!"—it means anything. Rather everything. O, yes, for petit dejunier I tried an old favoriate Oeufs Florentine, a divine souffle of eggs and spinach.

Ladies and gents, that's mange! Swaying through the corridors and up to the promenade deck I caught up with Sam Hellman, the magazine writer, at the second turn. It was our first meeting since we showed the late Rudolph Valentino the St. Louis levee by gaslight, about 10 years ago. We reuned by a taffrail.

Sam now lives in Paris and his outstanding ears, which he frequently parodies, recall Bugs Baer's quip: "He looks like a taxi with both doors wide open." Others on board are Harry Bannister of the Ann Harding hoop-de-doo; Claude Bowers, deservedly famed editorialist; Jean Tillier, a head man of the line at 34; and Baroness Levi.

Following an over-night decision to sail, I phoned Harry Silvey at the Lambs to say farewell. "I think I'll go along," he said. I double-dared him, and that prematurely gray gallant is making his first trip across. It is always fun showing the novitiate European sights. One takes on a tremendous worldliness, and what whoppers one can tell with no fear of contradition!...

* * *

Silvey, incidentally, has not been seen since the take-off. A deck steward tells me he saw him last, in the moonlight silhouetted in a sequestered nook on top deck. "Wiz ze young mam'selle in red," he offered. Within yelling distance of Quarantine, and in clutches of the ship's vamp already! Blond voyage!

* * *

The bar, in a modernistic glitter and icy tinkle, always is exhilarating, even for a teetotaler. A tweedy sprout in plus fours, with eyes alight with invitation, and slightly anointed with the oil of gladness, beckoned me to his table, naively confessing: "I just downed two dry Martinis and, Mister, I feel elegant. Let's wade into a magnum of—" As suddenly, his face surged with a gray pallor, he looked about wildly and with an incoherent mutter, pss-s-t! he was gone. Dat ole debbil sea! And the pink bereted flapper who yelled to approaching friends: "Am I necking young Mr. Thomas Collins!"

About the French is a beplumed fuss over nothing whatever, utterly captivating. In a light doze awhile ago in my berth, I was conscious of a presence. When my lids fluttered a steward whispered: "M'soo, is awake!" He slid out, returning with an epauleted mogul who inquired to know if I would receive another person, obviously his superior. This gentleman, most magnificent of all, came in a flurry of quick bowing. He wanted to know if he might bring a vase of roses from Purser Villar, the sea's most celebrated Sir Galahad. A clap of the hands and my myrmidon came with the flowers. I've thought up something dandy to trick it up even more. Just before the flowers arrive, they should ring in a leather-lunged trumpeter in periwig and knee pants.

With a dozen exceptions, this ship certainly is not cluttered with Maxine Elliots. I'm not angling to be caught in a web of intrigue, but, in sedate maturity, I'd like to feel at least I'm resisting temptation. So far, the feminine flotilla gives an idea the trip was made to order for a Trappist monk.

Listen, World!

My Brother's Keeper

I AM my brother's keeper.

And if I do not keep him wisely and generously, I will suffer as well as he.

Elsie Robinson

Let me confess, before we go any further, that I did not always feel this way about my brother. This was when I would not even admit that he WAS my brother.

My kindly and high-minded parents assured me that he was; but I looked him over, and rejected their notion with scorn.

All those stupid, lazy, dirty, silly and, at times, actually criminal people "my brothers"?

The tough kids who lived across the railroad tracks; the slatternly women who lolled out of tenement windows, smelling of boiled cabbage, with the sooty lace curtains brushing their greasy hair; the leery, baggy old men who doddered in front of the livery stable—all these "my brothers"?

NOTHING DOING!

Big-hearted philosophers could call such creatures "brothers" if they wished, but I despised, denied and rejected the relationship.

I—so I convinced myself—had nothing in common with such disgusting beings. It was true they belonged to the human race, as did I. But there was no other bond between us. I was not responsible for them, nor for their plight, and no one was going to hang that responsibility on to me.

Nor was their plight excusable. It was their own fault. All men were "born free and equal." If, by their own shiftlessness, they chose to become what they were, let them suffer the consequence.

I, too, have been born poor. I, too, have lacked opportunity; had suffered ill health; had experienced misfortune. But I, unlike these, had been willing to work hard, had refused to take the count. Then why should I share my hard-won gains with them? Why should I call them "brothers" and help them, when they refused to help themselves.

So I though, in my ignorant and intolerant youth.

And then life took me in hand, smacked me down, rubbed my nose in the gravel, handed be a couple of haymakers—and taught me some sense. And I came to see the other fellow's point of view.

He hadn't been "born free and equal." He was no more responsible for his start than I was for mine. I was proud of myself because I had surmounted my obstacles. I had despised him because he hadn't surmounted his. But, whatever my other handicaps, I had been born with energy and intelligence which gave me the power to surmount, and he had been born with inertia and stupidity mingled, like a vicious, secret poison, in his thin blood and rickety bones.

I was the child of mysterious and manifold destinies, and those destinies "which shaped my ends" had somehow proved a blessing to me. But he was also a child of mysterious and manifold destinies which, beyond all his willing, had proved a curse to him.

And so, because we both came blindly out of the same darkness and moved blindly through the same twilight into the darkness again, he WAS my brother and I was his. Since we were linked by a common fate, set on a common trail, it was up to me to be my brother's keeper; for if my brother remained stupid, my own wisdom was shackled; and if my brother remained diseased, my own health was poisoned; and if my brother remained bound, I could not be free.

And the proof of this I could see in every circumstance of my life. I could see great governments and great industries crumbling because the rich had not helped the poor. I could see proud peoples brought to shame and vicious debauchery because the wise and the good had not helped the wicked and the weak.

An so, today, I know I am my brother's keeper. If I do not keep him, we will both be lost.

Just Folks

Questioning

Something seemed to whisper as I stood upon the land
And watched the white-capped waves come in to die upon the sand:
"There's not a rock out yonder where the great blue waters play
But has experienced more of life than the oldest man today.

"What is the process working? Why should the waters move?
What is it sky and earth and stream and stars were made to prove?
And why is man so feeble, and granite made so strong?
And why must pain be suffered if life is not for long?"

There by the blue lake standing a great rock seemed to say:
"Man still will come to question ten thousand years away,
But all I've learned I'll tell you. It cannot be for naught
That white waves breaking on a ledge can stir man's deepest thought."

A Change Demanded: 'Worm Has Turned'

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

NO ONE will be deceived into believing that the American Legion did not emphatically express its opinion of Mr. Hoover's action in ordering the army into Washington to expel the veterans with tanks and bayonets and to burn their shacks. His name was not mentioned; but his Administration was, and there is no mistaking the meaning and intent.

It was rather stupid in Pat Hurley, Secretary of War, to leave his defense of the unnecessary turning of bayonets against the soldiers of the Republic who are in want on the seats of the delegates. It would have been more courageous and manly for the doughty Mr Hurley to have stayed in the convention to make his defense face to face instead of running away. But it takes more courage to do that than to authorize the burning of the shacks of homeless veterans.

Perhaps Mr. Hurley, who thinks the jobless should "shift for themselves," did not dare reiterate to the convention that there had been no burning of these shacks. His own assistant has since repudiated him in saying:

> "In any event they were going to be burned, so what difference did it make?"

There is something so inhuman in this comment that it answers itself.

The attempt of Mr. Hoover to blacken the veterans by having them characterized as "criminals" and "bums" required some answer from self-respecting soldiers—and it has been made.

Banks Might Have Been Saved

Mr. Hurley is coming to be quite an asset for Mr. Roosevelt. When, in addressing an audience in South Dakota this week, he was interrupted with the comment: "There are no banks open in my town," he was not in the least happy in his response that but for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation "there wouldn't be any banks open." He emphasized the seriousness of the situation, but he did something more. He invited the reply that but for the indecision, the procrastination, the silly pollyanna attitude of Mr. Hoover, action would have been taken eighteen months before it was and thousands of banks now closed might have been kept open and many millions of money lost to depositors might have been saved.

Thus did he emphasize the fact that even when Mr. Hoover does the right thing he does it too late or at the wrong time.

Hoover Still Stands Aloof

Playing politics with human misery is not turning out well. Last week Mr. Hoover admitted in his welfare speech that there is to be a major battle against suffering and starvation this Winter—just as there has been every Winter since he became President under the pledge to "eliminate poverty" and put "a chicken in every pot." He sets forth the tragic realities with a frankness which has not been apparent in his former utterances. But he clings to the idea that the prevention of starvation in a great national crisis is up to private charity, and that the people's governmen, as a government, may stand aloof. Not one penny of Federal money for the hungry—that was the "great American principle" for which he has contended for three years. He knows perfectly well that private charity has not been able to scratch the surface; that four-fifths of the money for the prevention of starvation has come from governmental sources, other than the Federal. And it is not easy patiently to take this:

> "Those in destitution and their children are receiving actually more regular and more adequate care than even in normal times!"

That is not the report we are receiving from welfare organizations.

These are doing a Herculean work to the full extent of their resources, but children are hungry and inadequately fed. The mothers of the jobless know whether their children are faring as well as when their men had work. You simply cannot learn these things from week-end parties with politicians in the fishing camp at Rapidan.

So everyone must give as liberally as they can to the welfare organizations this Winter, for the Federal Government will give as little as it dare.

Administration Fought Relief

Conditions would not be so bad today had the Administration, instead of opposing every plan for preparation because of its Democratic origin, faced realities three and four years ago instead of minimizing the tragedy with false and misleading statements.

It fought the Wagner bills consistently and persistently, killing some by Presidential and Cabinet lobbying, and some by vetoes, until it was literally forced by a shocked public sentiment into accepting some.

Having reluctantly accepted the Wagner-Garner bill, for which Mr. Hoover takes credit in his speech, it postponed putting it into operation for almost two months until, under the lash of Wagner's criticism, it has been forced to take a step. It has taken Mr. Hoover almost four years to come to this conclusion:

> "The time has gone by when a depression could be regarded only as a depression of business. It must be regarded now as something deeper, involving a social responsiiblity."

We have been hammering away on this thought in these columns for almost two years while Administration organs were "warning" the public against "hysterical and sentimental ideas." The trouble with the Administration is that from the beginning it has ignored the human equation and thought only of the "depression of business." And business has meant the market. Now we have the recognition of "social responsibility." Yes, but more—there is a heavy governmental responsibility that has been too little recognized.

Our Institutions Being Misused

It is partly because the present regime, bound together through eleven years by the golden thread of Mellon, has thought solely in terms of Big Business and the stock market that the people are determined on a change. They are determined that government shall think a little in terms of the average man.

Mr. Roosevelt at Denver expressed it well. Vast numbers of the victims of the policies of the last decade, in their bitterness, are questioning the worth of our institutions for the average man. There is nothing wrong with our institutions; there is much that is wrong in the misuse of them. Some people would use the Bible as a footstool. If our institutions are to be preserved the Government must be restored to the uses of the average man; and not treated as a subordinate agency of a powerful few. And that means, as Roosevelt says, that we must get back to the Jeffersonian fundamentals.

That is not even a partisan thought. Nicholas Murray Butler, in a fine address has said that the preservation of our institutions is dependent on our return to the Jeffersonian ideas and ideals. And Roosevelt says:

> "The Jeffersonian form of government means government by men chosen by the average of the electors and the carrying on of the government for the benefit of the average of the electorate."
